IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON.

The Address of the Loyal Governors to the President.

Their Support Pledged to the Successful Prosecution of the War.

Cordial Approval of the Emancipation Proclamation.

A Tribute to the Valor of Our Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 2.

Address to the President of the United States, adopted at a meeting of Governors of the loyal States, held to take measures for the more active support of the Government, at Altoona, Penn., on the 25th day of September, 1862.

After nearly one year and a half spent in contest with an armed and gigantic rebellion against the National Government of the United States, the duty and purpose of the loyal States and people continue, and must always remain, as they were at its origin, namely: to restore and perpetuate the authority of this Government and the life of the nation, no matter what consequences are involved in our fidelity.

Nevertheless, this work of restoring the Republic, preserving the institutions of democratic liberty, and justifying the hopes and tells of our fathers, shall not fail to be performed; and we pledge, without hesitation, to the President of the United States the most loyal and cordial support hereafter, as heretofore, in the exercise of the functions of his great office. We recognize in him the Chief Executive Magistrate of the Nation, the Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy of the United States, their responsible and constitutional head, whose rightful authority and power, as well as the constitutional powers of Congress, must be vigorously and religiously guarded and preserved, as the condition on which alone our form of Government, and the constitutional rights and liberties of the people themselves can be saved from the wreck of anarchy or from the gulf of despotism. In submission to the laws which may have been or which may be duly enacted, and to the lawful orders of the President, originating always in our own spheres in the Sovereign Government, we mean to exercise to the most vigorous exertion of all our lawful and proper powers, contending against treason, rebellion and the public enemies, and whether in public life or in the private station supporting the banner of the Union until its cause shall conquer, until that victory shall perch upon its standard, or the rebel host shall yield a doubtful, rightful and unchallenged submission.

And impressed in the conviction that an army of unknown depth, until the war shall end, to be constantly kept on foot, to be raised, armed, equipped and trained at home, and ready for emergencies, we respectfully ask the President to call for such a force of volunteers for one year's service, of not less than 100,000 in the aggregate, the quota of each State to be subject after it shall have filled its quotas of the requisitions already made for volunteers and for militia.

We believe that this would be a measure of military prudence, while it would greatly promote the military education of the people.

We hail with heartfelt gratitude and encouraged hope, the proclamation of the President, issued on the 22d instant, declaring emancipated from their bondage all persons held to service or labor as slaves in the rebel States where rebellion shall last until the first day of January coming. The right of any person to retain authority to compel any portion of the subjects of the National Government to rebel against it, or to maintain its enemies, implies, in those who claimed the possession of such authority, the right to rebel against the Government, and therefore the right to maintain National law or military Government in a State or Territory in rebellion, implies the right and the duty of the Government to liberate the slaves of the men firing treason, by appropriate proclamation and assurance of protection, in order that all who are capable, intellectually and morally, of loyalty and obedience, may not be forced into treason, as the willing tool of rebellious traitors. To have continued indefinitely the most efficient cause, support and stay, of the rebellion, would have been in our judgment, unjust to the loyal people, whom measure and blows are made a willing sacrifice on the altar of patriotism, would have discriminated against the man who is compelled to surrender his property against the person who is to surrender his child to the hardship of the camp and the battle-field, and in favor of rebel masters permitted to retain the slave who treasons have been a first declaration against humanity, justice, the rights and dignity of the Government, and against a sound and wise national policy. The decision of the President, in strike at the root of the rebellion will lend new vigor to the efforts, and lend his aid here to the cause of the people.

Concurring in the President our respectful and cordial confidence, we trust and believe that the policy now inaugurated will speedily vindicate over our enemies, and secure to the nation and to the people the blessing and favor of Almighty God. We believe that the blood of the heroes who have already fallen, and those who may yet give up their lives to their country, will not have been shed in vain. The splendid valor of our soldiers, their patient endurance, their manly patriotism, and their courageous sense of duty, demand from us and from all their countrymen the homage of the deepest gratitude, and the pledge of our earnest sympathies and supports. A just regard for those brave men, whom we have committed to the chance of the field, and for our own honor as members of the nation which may lawfully require of us to perform our duties as true friends, confederates, and now, presenting to our National Chief Magistrate this expression of our deliberations, we devote ourselves to our country's service, and we will surround the President in our constant support, trusting that the fidelity and zeal of the loyal States and people will always assure him that he will be constantly maintained in pursuing with vigor this war for the preservation of the National life and the hopes of humanity. OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 2.

THE EMANCIPATION COMMISSION.

The Emancipation Commissioners will, on 1st of November, close the examination of cases where compensation is claimed for slaves freed by the Emancipation Act. They will then proceed to make up their final report.

THE REBEL CONSCRIPTION.

Numbers of rebel conscripts daily come within our lines at Centreville, to escape the intolerable hardships of a service in which they are compelled to fight against their country, without even the common comforts of soldier life. Several refugees from Fredericksburgh, Va., arrived here to-day, and report that the rebel Government is enforcing the conscription act with pitiless severity. More than six hundred had already been forced into the rebel ranks from that city. We have reliable information that large forces of rebel conscripts pass daily through Culpepper toward Winchester. Deserters state that the number will at least 10,000 during three days last week. They are poorly armed, mostly with shot-guns, though many have guns captured at Manassas and Bull Run. They are destitute of uniforms, and generally of shoes and hats. They are marched directly to the front, a great many being Unionists, who declare they will not fight, but will desert at the first opportunity.

THE PROCLAMATION.

Persons from the neighborhood of Warrenton and Culpepper say that the President's proclamation will have no effect in that region, because there will be but no slaves to free. Great numbers of negroes, both slave and free, are being sent to Richmond—the free negroes to be sold to compensate those who have lost their slaves. Thus is the leaven of freedom being distributed.

IMPORTANT MILITARY INVESTIGATIONS.

The Military Board over which Gen. HUNTER presides, is not a mere Court of Inquiry, as erroneously stated in some papers, but a Military Commission, invested with the highest powers known to military law. Its composition in this case is excellent, and its investigations bid fair to become of the greatest importance. In the character of the officers composing this Commission, we have every guaranty that the most searching scrutiny will attend every case examined, and punishment be sternly meted out to all convicted criminals. The Harper's Ferry case is at present under examination, and will be followed up, it is hoped, by others of like character.

A TREASURY CIRCULAR.

The Treasury Department has just issued a circular of instruction to Collectors and other officers of the customs, in executing certain provisions of the Tariff Act of July 14, 1862, by which it is provided that where the original invoice is produced at the time of making entry thereof, and the tare shall be specified therein, the consignee, owners or agents must declare in writing their assent to the estimate of tare as set forth in the invoice, and if the Collector or naval officer see fit the tare shall be so estimated. In the absence of such written assent, or if the Collector doubts the correctness of the tare as specified in the invoice, it will be his duty to cause the actual tare or weight of the cask or package to be ascertained, and for that purpose he may cause to be emptied and weighed such number of casks and packages as he may think proper. In all other cases actual tare only shall be allowed.

The following regulation is prescribed relative to the 21st section, relative to the withdrawal of goods from public stores or bonded warehouses, viz.: All goods, wares or merchandise transhipped to a port on the Pacific or western coast may, on arrival there, be entered for consumption, without it is one year from the date of the original importation into the United States, or may be warehoused for such period of the three years authorized by law as may not have expired since their first arrival in the United States.

DEPARTURE OF THE DANISH MINISTER.

Col. W. R. RASMUSSEN, for several years past the esteemed Minister of Denmark to the United States, left Washington, yesterday, for his own country, whence he will start for China, having been commissioned by his Government to negotiate a treaty of commerce with the Celestial Empire.

PAROLED SPIES.

Among the paroled prisoners now at large in this city, is a young man named JULIAN W. LEE, who claims to be a son of the rebel Gen. LEE. Some months ago he was arrested on the charge of furnishing information to the enemy, but was released after a few weeks' confinement, upon his parole of honor. He circulates among the secession families of Washington, and spares no pains to convince those who will listen to him of the justice of the rebel cause. The sooner we are rid of these fellows (which will be soon, as all paroled prisoners have been ordered to report to headquarters previous to being exchanged,) the better. Much of the contraband information which reaches the rebel capital, if it is safe to assert, proceeds from these paroled prisoners, who have free access to all sources from which correct information comes; and that which correspondents are prohibited from sending by telegraph.

RENOMINATED.

Col. FARNSWORTH, of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, has received information that he was, yesterday, renominated for Congress by the Republican Union Convention in the Second Illinois Congressional District on the first ballot.

Western men are delighted with the news from Cincinnati, of the nomination to Congress of JOHN GREENBACK and JOHN A. GURLEY. They say the re-election of the latter is sure, and that there is at least a fair chance that GREENBACK may succeed PENDLETON, the present Peace Democrat member from the First Cincinnati District.

TURNED UP.

Acting Assistant Paymaster NILLO, of the Navy, recently published as missing, has recently reported to the proper department.

RECOGNIZED.

AMANDA SILVERS has been recognized by the President as Vice-Consul of France at the City of Baltimore.

SICK AND WOUNDED IN HOSPITALS.

The number of sick and wounded in the various hospitals here amounts at present to 18,000. About 6,000 wounded from the battle-fields in Maryland have been sent here and to other places, exclusive of 2,500 remaining in Frederick and vicinity.

DISLOYAL EMPLOYE ARRESTED.

V. B. JACKSON, an employe in the City Post-office, was arrested on Monday night by order of the Provost-Marshal, charged with delivering letters from Richmond to parties here. He was one of the employed nurses.

REBEL STATE PRISONERS.

About three hundred State prisoners are in confinement here at present.

DEPARTMENT OF MISSOURI.

It will be seen by the following General Order that the State of Kansas is again, for the third time, included in the Department of Missouri:

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, Sept. 19, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 195.—1. By direction of the President the States of Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, and the bordering Indian Territory, will constitute the Department of the Missouri, and will be commanded by Maj.-Gen. S. R. CURTIS; Headquarters at St. Louis.

2. Alton, Illinois, is attached to the Department of the Missouri.

3. Western Virginia is attached to the Department of the Ohio; Headquarters at Cincinnati.

By order of the Secretary of War,

The President a Visitor to Gen. McClellan's Headquarters.

The Reconnoissance Across the River on Wednesday.

The Enemy Routed from Martinsburgh.

A Brisk Skirmish with the Rebel Cavalry.

LIST OF CASUALTIES.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Thursday, Oct. 2.

President LINCOLN arrived at Harper's Ferry on a special train from Washington, yesterday afternoon. He was met by Maj. RUFF and Capt. SUMNER and escorted to Gen. SUMNER's headquarters.

The President was accompanied by Maj.-Gen. McCLELLAN, of the army of the West, and members of his Staff, the Marshal of the District of Columbia, the President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and several other gentlemen.

At Gen. SUMNER's headquarters he was met by Gen. McCLELLAN. After a cordial interview the President, accompanied by Gen. McCLELLAN, Gen. SUMNER and a brilliant cavalcade, composed of Division and Brigade Generals, with members of their Staffs, proceeded to review Gen. SUMNER's splendid army corps on Bolivar Heights. The troops presented a fine appearance, and greeted the President and Gen. McCLELLAN with great enthusiasm.

The President also visited the ruin of the railroad bridge and Government buildings at Harper's Ferry, when he returned to Bolivar, and passed the night with Gen. SUMNER.

This morning the President, accompanied by Gen. SUMNER and other Generals, visited the troops on Loudon and Maryland Heights, and rode over the ground where our troops surrendered.

At noon he left Harper's Ferry and rode over to Gen. McCLELLAN's headquarters. During the afternoon, Gen. McCLELLAN conducted the President over the Antietam battle-field, accompanied by a brilliant array of officers, including Gen. McCLELLAN's Staff.

The President manifested the greatest interest in everything connected with our recent victory.

In the evening he returned to Gen. McCLELLAN's headquarters, where he will pass the night in camp. He was serenaded by the band of the Second Cavalry.

To-morrow he will review the other troops of the Army of the Potomac.

On Saturday he will return to Washington, on a special train, via Frederick.

The President is in excellent health and spirits, and is highly pleased with the good condition of the troops.

THE RECONNOISSANCE OF WEDNESDAY.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 2.

SHARPSBURGH, Md., Thursday, Oct. 2.

A cavalry and artillery reconnoissance was made to Martinsburgh yesterday. At 8 o'clock in the morning, Gen. PLEASANTON, with the Eighth Illinois, Eighth Pennsylvania, and Third Indiana Cavalry Regiments, and Gibson's United States Battery, crossed the Potomac at Blackburn's Ford, and proceeded on the road to Martinsburgh. When one and a half miles out the enemy's videttes were discovered and driven in. Our force pursued them to within half a mile of Martinsburgh, when one piece of artillery was brought up and some rebel cavalry which was seen a short distance beyond the town was shelled. The enemy, numbering about five hundred, fled from the town, and crossed Bromly's Ford across the Opequan Creek. Our cavalry did not follow.

At Martinsburgh twenty-five conscripts were released. Our force remained in Martinsburgh about half an hour, and then returned toward Shepherdstown. The enemy collected his forces and gave pursuit, attacking our cavalry at the point where the Williamsport and Winchester road crosses the road from Martinsburgh to Shepherdstown. The enemy's cavalry near Williamsport came up and joined in the attack.

The Eighth Illinois, under command of Maj. MADILL, with Gibson's Battery, formed the rear-guard, and was the principal force engaged—the Third Indiana and Eighth Pennsylvania having been detached for guard and picket duty. The enemy presented a bold front, and advanced with determination, evidently impressed with the belief that we had but one piece of artillery. He soon discovered his mistake, however, when his ranks were ploughed with shot from all of Gibson's pieces. The Eighth Illinois emptied the contents of their carbines and pistols at close range, which were replied to by the rebels. The enemy followed our force to within a short distance of Shepherdstown.

The enemy's loss greatly exceeded our own. Besides the following list of wounded and missing, we had three horses shot. With two or three exceptions, our loss was confined to the Eighth Illinois.

WOUNDED IN EIGHTH ILLINOIS.

Co. C—Charles H. Jones, leg; Truman J. Wilder, neck and shoulder; Peter F. Chase, neck; L. A. Lincoln, nose.

Co. E—Sergt. E. S. Daggett, neck; Asa W. Weldon, head; Corp. Frank E. Lee, wrist; Sergt. Chas. Bradley, head.

Co. F—Sergt. H. A. Pearsons, arm; Stephen M. Dutridge, arm.

Co. G—L. P. Judy, head; John M. Pearson, groin; James O'Brien, leg.

MISSING.

Sergt. Peter Martin, Co. C; Corp. George W. McKenzie, Co. C; Samuel Houghton, Co. C; Calvin Weim, Co. E.

LEE'S ARMY.

From the Washington Star, Oct. 1.

Our information from Gen. McCLELLAN'S army up to yesterday afternoon, when he was busy, as ever since his late engagements, in putting his new forces into proper condition—a work of great time, as experience has invariably proved. Nevertheless, he is accomplishing it satisfactorily and with celerity.

Since his retreat into Virginia, Lee has undoubtedly received reinforcements to the extent of between twenty and thirty thousand men, all conscripts, with very few exceptions. Yet his army, we believe, is not stronger to-day than immediately after the battle of Antietam, owing to the large numbers of desertions (from among the conscripts) which are of daily occurrence of twenty, fifty or a hundred, and scattered over the country in the rear.

Lee is still conscripting in the country around Strasburgh, with remarkable success, seizing all males of white, black, or mixed, and children walking to the streets accompanied by their wives and children. The presence of troops is obviated in the ranks in a larger number than before was hardly felt. In weakness and disorganization of his veteran and willing men, greatly in the need, under ordinary circumstances, which it is believed in our army, was hardly to be postponed more than ten days longer, unless Lee's army dissolves of its own accord before that time, through desertions, lack of clothing, scarcity of provisions, &c., the country within reach of his commissaries and quartermasters having already been cleaned almost as bare as the palm of one's hand to clothe and feed his army.

FROM HARPER'S FERRY.

A Visit from Gen. McClellan—A Reconnoissance.

HARPER'S FERRY, Va., Tuesday, Sept. 30, 1862.

Gen. McCLELLAN, accompanied by his Staff, paid a visit to this place on Saturday. After riding through the village and spending an hour with Gen. SUMNER at his headquarters, he returned to Sharpsburgh, ten miles distant, about 4½ o'clock in the afternoon.

Yesterday morning another important reconnoissance was made in the direction of Winchester. The force, under the command of Maj. WERTH, consisting of the Fifth and Sixth Cavalry and two pieces of a horse battery, proceeded to within one mile and a half of Charlestown, Lieut. ADAMS, who held the advance, approaching the place in the same manner as Capt. DRUMMOND had on the Friday previous.

We drove in their pickets, capturing one, with his horse; and on discovering their cavalry drawn up this side of the village, so arranged our own as to mask the cannon, which coming steadily forward, poured a sudden shower of grape and canister among them before they were aware of their presence. The rebels immediately fled, and we advanced until meeting their forces drawn up in line of battle at Charlestown and supported with artillery. Our guns immediately opened upon them, and were replied to with solid shot, which, though striking uncomfortably close, injured no one. Not wishing to bring on a general engagement, our forces withdrew, reaching the Ferry about 1 o'clock in the day. This second reconnoissance settles the fact that the rebels intend to make the line between Winchester and Martinsburgh their base of defensive operations. Though having but a comparatively small force at Charlestown, they present a bold front in order to deceive us, while they are fortifying at Winchester and destroying the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad track above and below Martinsburgh. Two citizens who had been impressed, and were being conveyed to the rebel army, were liberated by our men. They confirm the statements of numerous refugees, that the rebels are forcing all able-bodied men through the valley into their ranks. A rebel Lieutenant, who had gone out to procure breakfast at a farm-house, was brought in by our pickets on Sunday. The statement of the Washington Star, that Gen. SUMNER's Corps has moved to this place, is not true. They occupy their old position on the Maryland side. J.

FURTHER FROM PENSACOLA.

Our naval reporter boarded the Iroquois, yesterday, at the Navy-yard. She brings five days' later news from Pensacola.

A large naval expedition was concentrating at that port, and another, supposed to be intended for acting in concert with it, was to rendezvous at a given point off the coast of South Carolina.

The United States steam frigate Susquehanna, which had previously been ordered on active service, was condemned after a survey.

The officers of the fleet had several interviews with rebel inhabitants of Florida, many of whom expressed themselves sick of the rebellion. All the luxuries and necessaries of life were dearer in the interior than even in Virginia. Scouts from some of the gunboats report intense suffering among the poor whites of Florida and Alabama.

The Hartford, flag-ship of the entire squadron under Admiral FARRAGUT, had just been put in fighting order, and rumors were rife that another fleet was about to be sent from the North to reinforce the Admiral.

Soldiers were deserting from the rebel forces in Alabama, which were not very numerous in the neighborhood of Mobile. The reconnoissance recently made toward that city was to be followed by others, but the vessels and officers to participate in them had not been made known.

Three iron-clad ships from New-York and Boston were reported to be looked for by the Commander-in-Chief.

The United States sloop-of-war Preble, which represented the American navy at the naval fête at Cherbourg, had been temporarily detached from active duty, and made a hospital ship.

There was a rumor, not believed, however, that WILSON'S Zouaves were to be soon ordered to Virginia.

The health of the fleet was very good.

The Iroquois is almost worn out with constant service. She arrived at this port yesterday morning, and proceeded to the Navy-yard for repairs. She left at Pensacola, Sept. 24, the United States sloops Brooklyn, Hartford, Potomac, Preble, and the gunboats Cayuga, Oneida and St. Jago de Cuba—all wooden—and the second division of the mortar fleet.

LOSS AT OPELOUSAS.—EDWARD T. NICHOLS, Commander; Daniel B. Harmony, Lieutenant and Executive Officer; Frederick McNair, Lieutenant; Benj. Vreeland, Surgeon; Robt. H. Clark, Paymaster; John McFarland, Acting Master; Charles F. Willard, Acting Master; John H. Long, First Assistant Engineer, in charge; E. S. Boynton, Third Assistant Engineer; Frank H. Haine, Third Assistant Engineer; John R. Blum, Third Assistant Engineer; Wm. Lemon, Acting Third Assistant Engineer; Wm. F. Farman, Paymaster's Clerk; Jacob H. Smalley, Acting Master's Mate; John A. Dixon, Carpenter; George Price, Acting Gunner.

From San Francisco.

ANOTHER LARGE SUBSCRIPTION FOR THE NATIONAL SANITARY COMMISSION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Monday, Sept. 29.

Trade is very dull and greatly depressed. Considerable quantities of drills, turpentine, tar, pitch and resin are going on shipboard for New-York.

Money is tight and inactive demand, at an advance in rates of 1½ to 2 per cent. The stringency is caused by the large shipments of corn and the inadequacy of the mint to supply the deficiencies for the time being.

Sight Exchange on New-York rules at 12@16 ⅌ cent. discount. Sterling bills sell for 48 ⅌ cent. premium for Bankers', and 49@49½ for commercial bills.

Legal tender notes are at 2 to 10 ⅌ cent. discount.

Sixty thousand dollars goes forward by to-morrow's steamer for the National Sanitary Commission, being an additional contribution of San Francisco alone. This sum will be materially increased by further city subscriptions, and by the subscriptions throughout the State which have earnestly commenced.

IMPORTANT FROM KENTUCKY.

The Commencement of Heavy Skirmishing.

DEFEAT OF THE REBELS.

Capture of Forty Thousand Rounds of Ammunition.

Arrival of the Cumberland Gap Forces at the Ohio.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, Oct. 2.

The Journal is informed of a sharp skirmish had night between Gen. SMITH's advance and 1,000 rebel cavalry, at Floyd's Fork, the enemy being posted on the surrounding hills. We repulsed them, but they returned. We then brought our artillery against them when they again fled. We captured in an old house in that vicinity forty thousand rounds of ammunition.

Heavy cannonading was heard on the Shelbyville Road, sixteen miles distant, all night the morning; result unknown.

The Journal also says a skirmish occurred this morning, five miles distant, on the Bardstown Road. The rebels were repulsed. Their loss is unknown. Our loss was 20 killed and wounded.

Gen. G. W. MORGAN, with his whole force from Cumberland Gap, has reached the Ohio River, opposite Portsmouth.

Cannonading has been heard to-day near Mount Washington, in the vicinity of Salt River.

The rebels evacuated Shelbyville last night, first compelling the storekeepers to receive Confederate scrip for what they wanted.

At Paris, Ky., all the storekeepers, except two secesh, sold their goods away. The rebels procured of the two a supply of blankets, paying in Confederate scrip. The blankets giving out, they insisted on pulling up three storekeepers' carpets for blanketing.

The secesh storekeepers declined receiving Confederate scrip for the carpets, when they were arrested and put in jail for discrediting Confederate scrip.

We learn that KIRBY SMITH has been playing the same game upon several secesh storekeepers at Lexington.

NINE MONTHS' TROOPS.

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, STATE OF NEW-YORK, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, ALBANY, Oct. 2, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 75.—1. The quota of this State, called for by the Proclamation of the President of July 2, having been organized and placed in service, leaving a balance of twenty thousand three years' volunteers to apply on the quota of August 4, Volunteers for nine months will be accepted to complete such quota, until the final orders for the draft.

2. Such nine months' volunteers will be recruited, subsisted and equipped as provided in General Orders No. 32, for volunteers for three years. They will be organized into companies for the infantry arm of the service, and attached to regiments in the field, except a limited number to be accepted and organized as independent companies of riflemen or sharpshooters. Applications for authorization to raise companies or parts of companies, will be sent, properly indorsed, by the Chairman or some member of the local Committee to this Department. Enlistment and other blanks can be procured from the same source, or from the Commandant of the depot for the district.

3. The regimental camps in the several Districts will be discontinued as fast as the regiments now organizing are completed, and all unattached companies of three years' volunteers, and such as may volunteer for nine months' service, under the provisions of this order, will assemble at the depots established for their respective Districts in General Orders No. 67. Requisition for the transportation of recruits to depots will be made by recruiting officers on the Quartermaster of the depot for their District, or, where no Quartermaster has been appointed, on the Quartermaster-General, at No. 51 Walker-street, New-York.

4. The enrolling boards of towns for which the enrollment books have not been filed, as required by paragraph II. of General Orders No. 67, are directed to transmit, without further delay, the requisite copies to be filed in this office, and in the offices of the Districts of their respective counties.

By order of the Commander-in-Chief:

THOS. HILLHOUSE, Adjutant-General.

WHAT NEW-YORK HAS DONE.

ALBANY, Thursday, Oct. 2.

The State of New-York has raised 20,000 three years' volunteers over her quota, under the first call for 300,000 men.

FROM SOUTHWEST MISSOURI.

Strength and Location of the Rebel Forces Threatening an Invasion—The Whole Force Estimated at Forty Thousand Men—Their Expectations, &c.

SARNEGIE, Mo., Thursday, Oct. 2.

A highly-responsible and reliable gentleman, who has enjoyed advantageous opportunity for ascertaining the number and location of the rebel forces menacing our southern border, and who has been in some of their camps within ten days, represents that in Newton County, five miles south of Granby, there are 4,000 rebels, under command of COCHRAN and RAINEY. Seven miles west of Neosho, in the same county, are 7,000, under command of Gen. CLARK, brother of the Adjutant-General of the rebel army. Half of this number under COCKRAN are Indians, all well armed. At Pea Ridge, Gen. RAINS has 4,500, and Gen. CANNON, 2,000. South of Forsyth, just over the Arkansas line, Gen. PARSONS has 2,000; and near PARSONS, toward the east, is Gen. McBRIDE, with about about 3,000. At Little Rock, Gen. HEBERT has 17,000.

The above figures show an aggregate force of 40,000 rebels. Of this, 23,000 are either within the boundaries of Missouri, or on its southern line. The whole force is under the command of Gen. HEBERT.

The rebels in all the camps indulge sanguine expectations of succeeding in St. Louis, and entertain no a doubt of a desire of their ability to do so.

The Conscript act of the Confederate States is in full force in Missouri, and numerous men have fled to escape the rebel service, or force the enemy. Many prominent citizens of them sensitive have fled to escape the conscription.

CITY POLITICS.

Democratic Nominations.

PLAN OF SUPPORT AGAINST SECESSIONISTS AND ABOLITIONISTS.

The Tammany and Mozart Conference Committees, appointed to report a plan of organization for the City Democracy, met yesterday, at 2 P. M., at Tammany Hall. The following are the names of the Committees:

Messrs.—Ex-Mayor Fernando Wood, Chas. Lynch, Mr. Lockwood, of the Second Ward, Mr. Kennedy, of the Fifth; and Mr. Bennett, of the Eighth.

Messrs.—Hiram E. Ely, E. C. Sanford, Wm. Miner, John E. Devlin, and Jas. Lynch.

A resolution was adopted embodying a plan of action to be submitted to the Tammany and Mozart General Committees, as follows:

Resolved, That feeling it impracticable to unite the General Committees at this time, but that harmony is unless can still exist to make upon conditions, we hereby recommend that such action be taken by the General Committee, whom we represent, or by the Nominating Conventions which may be created in their districts, as will thoroughly and completely unite the Democracy and the Conservative Republicans and citizens to be voted for at the ensuing election.

In the evening, the Tammany General Committee met, and a most turbulent time they had of it. The Connolly interest, and the Boyle interest, both fearful vent for their enthusiasm in whisky and low talk. In the ante-room there were chairs for both of the parties mentioned, with something more in the shape of a cake. The Police were on hand, however, in force of numbers, under the direct control of Acting Captain McGEE, and prevented any serious breach of the peace.

Up stairs, a vote was taken upon the renomination of Gen. CORCORAN in favor of Mr. KAVANAGH from the Fourteenth Ward, which was considered a test vote; and the friends of GEORGE ANN CORCORAN were so strong for declaring the renomination and the success of KAVANAGH, which resulted in the overthrow of the latter by a large majority.

Mr. NUNNOR J. WADSWORTH now took the floor, and made a strong speech in favor of Gov. SEYMOUR, (during all late everything that questioned had previously indulged in his late speech, and predicting the total disruption of the Republican Party after this election.

Gen. HIRAM WADSWORTH also addressed the assemblage upon the same topic, during which a "free fight" was being instituted in the lobby between the Boyle and Connolly factions. The Police quickly dispersing the disturbers, a most comical scene occurred upon the sidewalk. Everybody was ready for a fight, and the utmost turmoil prevailed. In the meantime the Committee members continued to talk about the war, and without wishing to say anything standing upon mountain summits, the crowd dispersed, leaving the great Democratic hostess in quiet possession of their wigwam until so late an hour that it is impossible this morning to give the details.

MOZART HALL GENERAL COMMITTEE.

A meeting of the Mozart Hall General Committee was held, last evening, at their headquarters, for the purpose of taking into consideration the resolution which was passed at a meeting of conference, in the afternoon, at Tammany Hall, Benjamin RAY, Chairman, presiding. After considerable discussion, the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, The Committee of Conference had reported to this body that a vote of the Democratic Committees on different candidates, Democratic, in conjunction with the Executive Committee of that body, and by consultation with the members of the General Committee from the several wards, for the purpose and empowered to confer with the General Committee of the Tammany Society, or any such or nominating committee representing it, or with any other Democratic organization, with full powers to make and agree upon, or nominate or to aid in primary elections to nominate the candidates to be supported for the several offices, to be voted for at the ensuing election; and any action taken by said Committee of Conference and the Executive Committee upon the subject of nominations, and any nominations made by them shall be binding upon this General Committee and upon the Democracy of Mozart Hall.

Speeches were made by Hon. FERNANDO WOOD and GERARD DAGG in favor of the union of the Democracy of the State. A Committee was appointed to make arrangements for a grand Seymour ratification meeting.

Meeting to Ratify the Nomination of Gen. Wadsworth for Governor.

An enthusiastic meeting was held last evening at the Republican Central Committee Rooms, corner of Twenty-third-street and Broadway, by the citizens of the Eighteenth Ward, for the purpose of ratifying the nomination of Gen. JAMES S. WADSWORTH for Governor. The meeting was organized by the appointment of E. F. COWLES as Chairman, with a number of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries.

Mr. WM. W. NORRISS then offered the following resolutions, which were adopted unanimously:

Resolved, That the importance of the success of our Union ticket at our coming State election cannot be over-estimated, for it will be a decisive step upon the question whether the Administration shall be sustained in pursuing a policy directly aimed at the preservation of the rebellion, the overthrow of the Union, and the overthrow of the Constitution, by which has plunged our good Republic into a civil war.

Resolved, That the Union nominations made at our recent State Conventions, meet our strongest approbation, and that we owe to our country every effort in our power, under our command to contribute to an overwhelming majority, the election of all the candidates.

Resolved, That we hail with great pleasure the nomination of Gen. JAMES S. WADSWORTH (cheers) for Governor, because he is a strong and upright Union man; because he is in favor of trying the rebels in submit to all the requirements of a good Government; because he is in favor of sustaining the President in prosecuting and enforcing his orders of Proclamation (cheers) relative to the emancipation of the slaves of rebels on the conditions stated, and because he is in every way fitted for that high position, and will stand by the Emancipation Proclamation, and adhere to the prosecution and unmolested prosecution in the future.

Resolved, That the noble course pursued by Lincoln Tilman for the Government in this crisis of its career and history, commands our admiration and support in good faith to stand him by so large a majority as we shall our distinguished candidate for Governor. [Cheers.]

Resolved, That we are earnestly in favor of the President's Proclamation respecting the slaves of rebels. That a vigorous prosecution of the war during is the policy, as well as the duty, of our country, of the country, and we pledge all our influence in support of this great and wise measure. [Cheers.]

The meeting was then addressed by David Dudley Field, Esq., Hon. Hy. E. Stanton, Hon. B. Rudolph Smith, Hon. Rufus F. Andrews, Philip Pendleton Cooke and others.

THE WAR ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

The Destruction of the Village of Prestonburg—Punishing Guerrillas—Rebel Outrages against the Conscripts, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

[illegible], Sept. 26, 1862.

The expedition down the river, of which I wrote [illegible] Lieut.-Col. Lowrance, in the Sixth Illinois Cavalry, and four, attended by the 7th Ohio [illegible]. On their way down they were fired into [illegible] of outlaws numbering about 200, near the village of Prestonburg, the county seat of Bolivar County, killing two soldiers, and two negro laborers, and wounding ten others. Our men returned the fire, killing two of the rebels and wounding seven. Lieut.-Col. L. immediately sent Adjutant Gove ashore with a flag of truce, and informed the inhabitants of the village that he would give them 48 minutes to leave, after which he would shell the town and burn it. They fled, and in an hour every house in the place was in flames, except a large one belonging to the town. I learned subsequently that [illegible] of the town. Lieutenant Gove informed me that some time previously the inhabitants of the town had sworn that on their return they passed down the river, destroying flat-boats and [illegible] within a few miles of Vicksburg.

When returning, as they approached Bolivar Bend a man informed them that a large force of guerrillas, with a battery, were waiting for them in the Bend. Lieut.-Col. L. formed his regiment, with the ram [illegible] Mississippi shore, and with sharpshooters on [illegible] to cover could be found, they pushed on, the chief obliging them to go close to the shore. For the purpose of drawing our men out of the dark, so that they might be raked by grape and canister, a squad of rebels opened fire from the bushes, to which no reply was made.

Instantly the howitzers on the transports and the guns on the ram were loaded and stood ready to fire whenever the battery should uncover. They did not long to wait. They opened upon the boats [illegible] thoroughfare and grape, being supported by about a thousand men. The guns on the boats and the sharpshooters replied instantly. In a few minutes a shell thrown from the bow of the Iatan burst under one of the enemy's guns, throwing it high into the air and dismounting it over. The fight continued about 20 minutes, during which two of our men were killed and two mortally wounded. We could not learn the number killed and wounded on the other side, as all of them, except the men who worked the battery, were hidden by the levee. Our boats were completely riddled with grape-shot, and it is a wonder so few were hurt.

One instance of bravery is worthy of record. The rebels poured a hot fire of musketry upon the artillerymen who were working a howitzer on the aft deck of the ram, killing one and wounding several, and disabling the gun. Lieut.-Col. Ellis, commanding the ram, saw it and rushed into the shower of bullets and loaded the piece and fired it; seeing which, the artillerymen returned to their post and worked the gun till their boats were out of reach. The rebels gave us a parting salute by sending a shot after us which entered the stern of the Alhambra and passed through the whole length of the boat over the heads of the men who were crowded into the cabin.

A HARD CASE.

On the 24th Gen. Charles E. Hovey's command moved up from Old Town and camped about eight miles below Helena. On the morning of the 21st, as I sat in a tent looking over upon the opposite shore, I saw about 20 contrabands gathered upon the bank. By the aid of a glass I counted 16 men, two women and three children, all evidently anxious to cross the river to our camp. A skiff was sent across and brought over four, but before it had time to return, six armed men rode up and commenced firing upon those poor timid creatures. Some ran over the sandy shore for the brush; some plunged into the water, and some were driven off by those obnoxious sons of the South. They shot at one negro in the water three times before they killed him. After they had run them into the brush, I heard twenty or thirty shots, and presume they carried out the order of Capt. Davis to shoot every slave who attempts to go into the National lines or has been in the National camps. Are they savages? Tell the effective sympathizers that their chivalrous friends shot down unarmed men, women and children as they dare not to attempt to secure their personal freedom, or gratify their curiosity to look at an encampment of United States soldiers. After the guerrillas separated themselves from the negroes, we sent a few shells after them, but presume none of them were hurt.

There is a prospect that our army will move soon, to act in conjunction with a large force of the new recruits now being organized in the West. There will be warm work on this field soon.

Hindman has an army of 10,000 going toward Missouri, and another of 30,000 to operate in Arkansas. Hindman's game must be checkmated. To answer the question, how we intend to do it, might defeat us.

Gen. Sumner's policy in reference to the slaves who come into our lines, has produced some ill-feeling, but I think it results from a misconstruction of it. He is determined to put this army on a war footing. To do this he will put beyond the lines, whether slave or free, black or white, every person whose presence weakens it. The unemployed slaves in our camps do greatly weaken our army. The females are in too many instances made to serve as prostitutes. Their presence is demoralizing. There are a few exceptions. It may appear cruel to take the men to labor and leave the women and children on the plantations; but Gen. Sumner says war is cruel in all its aspects. We don't bring our wives and children into camp. For a similar reason we must put slave women and children out, unless they are servants, in which case the officers employing them must be responsible for them, and see that they and their goods do not encumber our transportation when we move. Gen. Sumner will not deliver a fugitive slave to his master, nor aid the master by sending the slave beyond the lines at a time and place where the master might desire, but he will cause all slaves persons to be put beyond his lines.

KINNAN.

Parson Brownlow on the Emancipation Proclamation.

Parson Brownlow made a characteristic speech at the Michigan State Fair, on Thursday last. In the course of it he said:

Regarding Mr. Lincoln's proclamation I will say, that if he means to free the slaves of rebels in arms, and pay loyal men for them, I am for it, out and out. (Multitudinous applause.) I think the proclamation will time, and fortunate at this moment. If it had been made a month or six weeks later, the rebels would have made a proposition themselves to Emancipate their slaves and colonize them, and I think God that Did Abe has taken the grinch out of them. (Cheers.)

In conclusion, fellow-countrymen, I must stop, for "Rietzer is not himself again." I wish to say to you all, "Stand by your Government—stand by the army and the navy. The Administration may err. Let us take them with all their errors. When we have got an honest President, let us support him. Let us uphold our boys in the field. I detest those miserable misers at the North, who will not give their money for the support of the Government. These cursed miserly sons of Shylock, with their fingers, or a fourpence and their little shrivelled up, pennyworth hearts will not spend. When one of these miscreats get hold of a dime, if you listen closely you may hear it singing that song found in an old Methodist hymn-book:

"Farewell, vain world, I'm going home."

Let us stand by our officers and privates, and push the war with a vim and a vigor, and the rebellion will be put down. If it is necessary I am willing to go as a private to assist. I see enough young men about me to whip a whole rebel division. I have a gallant son who is Colonel of an East Tennessee regiment, and although I have two boys, as God is my judge, I would sooner hear that that boy, with all his high prospects, had been riddled from the soles of his feet to the crown of his head, while fighting under the glorious Stars and Stripes, rather than that he had won position and property while fighting under that infernal "disrag" that now floats over the Southern Confederacy. (Cheers.)

Gen. Case occupied a seat upon the platform while Parson Brownlow was speaking, and after he had concluded, was called on. He responded as follows:

"I am unable to say anything. My friend, who has just spoken, expresses my sentiments. My heart is in the cause, and I have faith that the virtue and integrity of the American people will crush out the rebellion."

The statesman was most enthusiastically cheered.

BOARD OF COUNCILMEN.

Proposed Donation to the Bible Mechanics' Association—City Railroad Receipts—"An Opinion as to an Opinion"—Concurrent Action to Appropriate $500 for a Sword for Gen. Corcoran—Debate on the Proposition to Administer Oath of Allegiance to City Employees.

A stated session of the Board of Councilmen was held at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. President Finckney in the Chair.

The Committee on Donations and Charities presented a report in favor of donating $7,500 to the Bible Mechanics' Association, which was laid over.

The Comptroller reported the returns made to his Department by the Sixth and Eighth avenue Railroad Companies (as required by resolution of the Common Council) of their monthly receipts, from Jan. 1 to Sept. 1, of this year, as follows:

Month.	Sixth-av.	Eighth-av.
January	$30,772 00	$31,305 04
February	27,020 22	29,056 46
March	27,020 72	29,072 [illegible]
April	26,104 18	29,944 47
May	28,600 22	32,502 61
June	29,784 19	31,432 36
July	27,409 94	29,626 [illegible]
August	26,126 21	28,029 [illegible]
Total	$222,837 41	$240,068 [illegible]

The following communication was read amid roars of laughter:

To the Honorable Board of Councilmen of the City of New-York:

Gentlemen: Upon my arrival at my office this morning I found the following resolution lying upon my table:

Resolved, That the Corporation Counsel be requested to inform this Board—the Board of Aldermen being abolished—on whom the duties of that body will devolve.

I presume the Board desires my views upon the above resolution. Not being called upon to give a legal opinion as to the authority of the Board of Councilmen to abolish the Board of Aldermen, yet I would say, by way of suggestion, that under the provisions of the "Montgomery Charter," the Board of Councilmen being the impeaching Board, I have no doubt but that they have the authority to abolish the Board of Aldermen for, except the Councilmen being, of course, the sole judges of the cause. That cause is fully stated in the resolution, being a "dereliction of duty." It might be suggested that the Aldermen, being a coordinate branch of the Common Council, it would have the same right to abolish the Board of Councilmen that the Board of Councilmen have to abolish the Board of Aldermen. In reply to this proposition it is only necessary to state that the Councilmen, being composed of a larger number, have right to abolish the Board consisting of a lesser number. (Vide Jarvis on the powers of Corporation; p. 204, sec. 6, par. 9—noted in the margin.)

But the question submitted is in the words of the resolution, "The Board of Aldermen being abolished, on whom the duties of that body will devolve." I would reply to the resolution that in my opinion, the Board being abolished, the duties will not devolve upon any one, and that the Board of Councilmen have the entire jurisdiction in all legislative matters pertaining to the City. I would also state that any attempt on the part of the Board of Aldermen to arrange with any candidates as to the division of spoils pertaining to the Street Department, is entirely void, for these reasons:

1. Imprimis—Meaning in the first place—The Street Commissioner has not been legally removed from his office, nor has the Deputy.

In Secundis—Meaning in the second place—The Mayor being an honest man, I do not believe he will nominate any person with whom the Ring can make a bargain.

In Tertius—Meaning in the third place—Of course any bargain that may be made will have no binding effect upon any persons.

I beg to state, in conclusion, that this opinion was written before you passed the resolution, and if it does not entirely meet your views, my assistant will frame a resolution to which I can give a satisfactory answer. It is to be distinctly understood no charge is to be made against the City for this legal advice, as under the decision in the case, Sprague vs. Providence Plantations, the Court unanimously decided that no man can obtain compensation for voluntary service. Respectfully,

Your obedient servant,
D. P. BRONYON,
Nassau-street, opposite office of Corporation Counsel.

The Chair decided that it could not be noticed further, not being a communication from any department of the City Government, and refused to entertain a motion to print it in the minutes.

The resolution from the Aldermen appointing Mr. Thomas F. Smith Sergeant-at-Arms of that Board, in place of Mr. Patrick H. Gallagher, recently deceased, and donating the salary of the office, for the remainder of the year, to his widow—it being understood that Mr. S. will perform the duties without the compensation pertaining to them—was concurred in.

The rebel and National flags presented from Fort Pickens were re-presented to the Board, were received—this time in concurrence with the Aldermen—to be accepted, placed in the Governor's Room, and the thanks of the Committee be returned to the donors. The Mayor sent the flags to this Board last July, when the same action was taken. The Aldermen, however, from their prolonged vacation and attention to more important matters, failed to reach the documents relating to the presentation till the other night. The directions usual in such cases were then given, and afterward, somehow or other, the papers were returned to the Councilmen. They are now finally disposed of.

The resolution from the other Board to appropriate $500 and appoint a Joint Committee of Ten to obtain and present to Gen. Corcoran a sword, sash and belt, came up for concurrence.

Mr. Green opposed it, prefacing his remarks in opposition, however, by saying that he supposed any one who should propose a check on any demonstration of honor to the gallant Gen. Corcoran, probably would meet with the disapprobation of the public; but he felt it to be his duty to object to this proposed expenditure. He did not believe it would accord with Gen. Corcoran's own wishes, because, when a banquet was tendered him, he signified his desire to avoid pomp and show, and intimated the determination that whatever might be offered in his honor should be presented in the tangible shape of recruits, or aids to obtaining them. Only a short time before preparing the banquet the Common Council decline to offer a special bounty for enlistments, but when Gen. Corcoran said the obtaining of recruits was his chief object, and the swelling of the ranks of his legion the best compliment that he could wish for, the City at once appropriated half a million dollars to help him on in that way. Gen. Corcoran had received high honors from the people, and needed no further testimony to assure him of their high appreciation of his patriotism.

Mr. Ross wished to reduce the sum to $300.

Mr. Stevenson said the General was a modest and deserving man, and ought to have some testimonial from the Corporation.

The resolutions were concurred in, and Messrs. Stevenson, Long, Gedney, Cross and Babcock were appointed the Committee of this Board.

The resolution from the other Board, proposing to require the taking of the oath of allegiance by all the City employes, led to a desultory but not very spirited debate.

Mr. Babcock moved to amend, so as to include a support of the Government as a part of the obligation of the oath.

Mr. Green said every officeholder took an oath to support the United States and Constitution and the State of New-York. Therefore, an additional oath of loyal citizenship was unnecessary.

Mr. Hogan did not like the proposed amendment. For one, he was somewhat dissatisfied with the Government, and would not like to swear that he would sustain it in all its acts. He was ready, however, to swear to support the Constitution of the United States, as often as he might be called upon to do so.

Mr. Green thought the last speaker rested under a strange delusion, and had contounded the forms Administration and Government. To change the Administration was a matter of politics, in which they could all indulge without being wrong, but to change the Government was a work only to be accomplished by revolution.

Mr. Jones opposed the amendment. He was willing to administer an oath to support the Constitution, but he certainly could not approve of some of the acts of the Government. He did not understand the necessity for imprisoning men without process of law. The local and State laws were strong enough to suppress disloyalty here, without the aid of the United States authority.

Mr. Wadsworth moved that there was nothing in the resolution requiring heads of departments to take the oath.

Mr. Stevenson said there was a necessity for a clear declaration from every citizen, to know who are loyal and who are not. He was satisfied that traitors walked Broadway every day—men who drew their pay from the public treasury of the State or the United States. If he could have his way, not only every city, but every United States official should take the oath of allegiance.

Mr. Green said he could not find fault with the authorities for putting men in Fort Lafayette, but for not having put enough of them there. There were many men walking our streets who richly deserved to be there.

Mr. Hogan moved to amend by inserting, instead of a requirement to support the Government, a requirement to support the Union as it was and the Constitution as it is.

Mr. Keech did not see how a man could swear to that. It would be about as consistent to make the oath so that every man could swear to support the Union as he wished it might be.

Mr. Leet had thought the amendment about supporting the Government was unnecessary, but the discussion here had led him to change his mind, and he was disposed to believe that it ought to be put in and the oath administered by the Common Council.

The Board were unwilling to give up the subject to a vote, and therefore laid it over, and made it the special order at the next meeting.

Adjourned till next Monday afternoon, at 5 o'clock.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

An Important Letter from Mr. Seward.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held at its rooms at 1 P. M. yesterday, Albert Gallatin, Esq., presiding, in the absence of Prescott Hall Felt, Esq., the Chairman of the Board. The attendance, owing to inclement weather and other causes, was very meagre.

After the discharge of some routine business, Messrs. Daniel Wadsworth, Wm. E. Smith and Chas. J. Marsh were formally elected members of the Chamber. John A. Stevens, Esq., the Secretary, then read the following communication from the Secretary of State, with the accompanying documents, from among which we omit the circular referred to, as it has already been published by this journal and all others throughout the country:

Department of State,
Washington, Sept. 24, 1862.

To the Chamber of Commerce of New-York:

Gentlemen: Under the authority of the President I submit to the Chambers of Commerce of commercial cities on the seaboard a copy of a circular which we have heretofore addressed to the diplomatic and consular representatives of the United States in foreign countries, and also an extract from a dispatch which has recently been received from William L. Dayton, Esq., our Minister Plenipotentiary at Paris, relating to the important subject discussed in the circular.

The attention of the Chamber of Commerce at New-York is respectfully called to the suggestions of Mr. Dayton, in regard to a reduction of the price of passage on board emigrant ships.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,
WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

Appended to the portion of the dispatch above mentioned:

[Extract.]

(No. 191.) Paris, Sept. 9, 1862.

Sir: A copy of your circular No. 19, dated Aug. 6, 1862, in reference to the wages of labor in the United States, was received by me, and at or about the same time another copy was received by our Consul at this port.

Mr. Brenzow immediately caused it to be published in the French papers. The result has been a perfect "rush" to this Legation. All seem to suppose that they are to have not only ample wages when they get to the United States, but their passage over paid, or in some way provided for by the Government.

They are of course greatly disappointed, or profess to be, to find the contrary. But it seems to me under the inducement of high wages it is held out, and the temptations of our military service, with its pay and bounty, a large emigration must take place; and this would be much increased, permit me to suggest, if this Government could induce ship-owners to lower the price of passage for emigrants. I make the suggestion in the hope that, with the aid of those familiar with these matters, you may lift upon some plan by which it can be carried out. * * *

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
WM. L. DAYTON.

On motion of Mr. Marshall, the above, and the consideration of the subject to which they relate were referred to a Special Committee of Five, composed of the following gentlemen: C. H. Marshall, T. Tileston, Moses H. Grinnell, E. E. Morgan, and John H. Williams.

No further business of importance arising, the Chamber adjourned.

THE NEW CUSTOM-HOUSE.

The Work of Refitting the Merchants' Exchange—Its Progress—The Apartments Occupied by the Warehouse Department—The Rotunda—How it is being Altered and Improved—The New Custom-house not Ready for Occupation.

The work of altering and refitting the building formerly occupied as the Merchants' Exchange, for the use of the different officers of the Customs at this port, progresses slowly. The contract for the work was entered into last Spring, and it was then thought that but little time would be required to make the changes necessary to a transfer of the Custom-house business thither. The changes have been more numerous, and the time required much longer than at first anticipated, so that there is little prospect that the building will be entirely ready for occupancy before the beginning of the year.

The necessity of the Sub-Treasurer for more room was so urgent, however, that the Warehouse Department, which formerly occupied the rooms over the Sub-Treasury, was removed about the middle of August to its new quarters at the Exchange. Temporary desks were fitted up and slight inconvenience submitted to for a time. Now, however, the Department is in good condition, and the rooms occupied by it nearly finished. The Department, (which, in the old building, occupied one large room,) is now divided in three sub-divisions, each of which has a room to itself. The Deputy and Chief Clerk, together with the Withdrawal clerks, occupy a room on the south side of the building on the floor of the rotunda. Most of the old furniture will be still kept in use after having been thoroughly cleaned and repaired. The clerks of the Liquidating Department have a room on the floor below, as also do the clerks who keep the Warehouse books. The Warehouse Department is the only one which has been enabled thus far to take possession of the new Custom-house.

The rotunda, which is much more handsome and commodious than that in the old building, will be fitted up very neatly. The walls have been thoroughly cleaned and look bright and handsome. A large glass dome in the roof admits an abundance of light to the desks below. In the centre of the room, surrounding the glass skylight through which light reaches the room beneath, a very neat iron railing, nearly six feet high, has been erected. Inside of this railing the desks of the clerks will be located. In front of each desk the railing can be lowered, so that during business hours papers can be passed through and business transacted by the clerks within with the importers and brokers without the railing. Around the exterior of the railing a very handsome shelf in lieu of white marble is placed for the benefit of the public. This counter, though narrow, for the purpose, will be convenient as a writing desk, on which to fill in entries and prepare the papers necessary for the clerks of the Government. Around the circumference of the rotunda is erected a railing similar to the one we have described, with a marble counter outside. Within this inclosure many clerks can be accommodated. The workmanship is creditable, and when the rotunda is completed and ready for occupation, the appearance of the room will be very fine. The iron railings are from the Ornamental Iron Works of Wood & Pinor, at Philadelphia.

The offices to be occupied by the Departments not yet mentioned are being altered in suitable condition. Some of the rooms in which the Law and Books are kept have been removed, from the old Custom-house, and placed in position in the new building. The furniture belonging to the Auditor's Department has been removed, and when properly repaired will be put in place. A portion of the furniture of the Naval office has also been removed.

When the removal of the business takes place, considerable confusion must necessarily ensue, however much care is taken to prevent it. When the Warehouse Department was transferred such was the case. The separation of the departments has caused some grumbling on the part of the importers and others, who have been compelled to run to and fro in the transaction of their business. It does not appear at present, however, that they will soon be relieved from this inconvenience, as it will take some time longer to effect all the contemplated changes, and to make the necessary repairs.

The passage-ways outside of the rotunda, leading to the rooms on the same floor, and to the staircases which conduct to the floors above, were formerly not finished. They are now being incased with frames, in which glass will be set, thus effectually protecting them from rain and snow; the change in the arrangement will not of course interfere with the light needed in the rooms opening on these passages.

The new building is greatly superior to the old in the amount of light which is admitted to the different rooms. In many of the rooms of the old Custom House the light is insufficient, and the clerks find it necessary to write by gaslight even on a fine day.

The room over the Sub-Treasury, formerly occupied by the Warehouse Department, has been taken possession of by the Sub-Treasurer, and although little has been done to it it up for his use, he has found it very convenient in delivering the notes of the new postage currency.

Business at the Custom-house.

ANOTHER MONTH OF LARGE RECEIPTS—OVER $5,300,000 RECEIVED FOR DUTY IN SEPTEMBER—COMPARISON OF THE RECEIPTS FOR DUTY IN 1860, 1861 AND 1862—THE EFFECT OF THE RISE OF GOLD AND DEMAND NOTES—PROBABLE REVENUE FROM CUSTOMS FOR THE YEAR—RECEIPTS THUS FAR AT OUR CUSTOM-HOUSE NEARLY $42,000,000.

Two months of the operation of the Tariff Act of 1862 have passed and no diminution in the amount of duties received has yet been apparent. The estimate made, when the last Congress was in session, that the duties could be made to reach the sum of $100,000,000 for the next fiscal year proves not to have been nearly as incorrect as many then prophesied it was. On the supposition that the new tariff would yield the above-named sum the law was framed and the Ways and Means Committee prepared the bill passed. The statement that under its operation the amount received would approach that sum was derided in Congress by some members, and was thought by many to be extravagant. It appeared probable that if the war should continue, the importations would diminish, and consequently the revenue derived from duty would be diminished to a greater than before. Events have seemed to believe which the framers of the country was already unfavorable to the importation of foreign goods and merchandise, that the passage of a tariff law, levying higher duties than the same already imposed, would increase the receipts. It appeared last Spring and Summer as though the importing trade must suffer on account of the encouragement afforded domestic manufactures, and from the unsettled state of the country. But strange to say, though the nation has been and still is involved in its most gigantic war, the people seem to have plenty of money and to expend it more freely than ever in purchasing articles of foreign growth and manufacture. The receipts at our Custom-house in July were unparalleled, but for this there was a good reason, namely, that importations were increased in anticipation of the new Tariff, to take effect on the 1st of August, and that the withdrawals of goods from bond to escape the new duties were very great. It appeared evident to all then that the next month must be a dull one, that the importations must be small, and the receipts greatly inferior to those usual at that season. It did not seem in the least probable that importers would make large purchases abroad at the beginning of the operation of the new tariff, especially when they had been afforded ample opportunity to anticipate it and enter such goods as they were in need of under smaller rates. It seemed that the importations must be small till the stock already on hand should have been consumed. But when the month had passed, the official returns showed that the receipts, though inferior to those of July, were nearly $2,000,000—a sum larger than that received in any month of 1860 or 1861. But a reason could be assigned for this by those who believed that importations must decrease. The new tariff had been in operation only one month, and the heavy receipts might have been due to the arrival of goods shipped by owners who believed the merchandise could reach this country before the 1st of August. Failing in this, the new duties must be paid; this reason could have been assigned with some appearance of validity, but another month has passed, and instead of falling off, the receipts have been greater than in August. For September, they were about $5,300,000. These figures prove that the demand for foreign merchandise is still good, and that the community does not feel inclined to cease its expenditures for them on account of the war.

We have already stated that the receipts this year are in excess of those of 1860 or 1861. A comparison of the monthly revenue in the three years will not be uninteresting, showing, as it will, the state of business before the rebellion, and in the first and second years of its progress:

January	$2,386,166 17	$2,066,202 39	$2,991,807 [illegible]
February	2,376,043 25	2,528,136 83	2,565,063 [illegible]
March	2,477,548 74	2,353,778 71	4,201,771 [illegible]
April	2,407,267 05	1,645,281 02	4,271,713 [illegible]
May	2,466,462 76	978,145 14	4,704,924 [illegible]
June	2,724,195 39	895,662 14	4,466,427 19
July	4,604,068 04	2,069,580 96	7,211,917 [illegible]
August	4,436,243 10	1,898,836 11	4,762,861 [illegible]
September	3,638,803 28	1,649,063 43	5,304,966 [illegible]
Total	$30,438,791 72	$15,989,394 61	$41,394,356 [illegible]

If the receipts during the remaining quarter of the year reach the average of the first nine months, the revenue for the year at this port alone will be about $56,000,000. It has been stated, on the authority of a Senator who investigated the subject, that the customs receipts at the port of New-York were usually in the proportion of five-eighths of those of the whole country. Taking this as the basis of calculation, the receipts at the end of the year will have been about $90,000,000. Considering the state of the country and the high tariff laws which have been in operation during the past year, this result is remarkable. By reference to the table given above, it will be seen that for the first nine months of this year, the receipts for duty at this port have exceeded those of the same period in 1860, when the country was in a state of peace, by about $11,000,000, and those of 1861, the first year of the war, by about $26,000,000.

The extraordinary rise in the value of demand notes which has taken place within the past two or three weeks, has been the occasion of considerable inconvenience to importers, who, in addition to the high rates of duty, are compelled to pay twenty per cent. or more for the currency with which to pay duties. The inflation in the price of gold and, in consequence, in the price of stocks and everything else, is leading our merchants to deal more carefully than heretofore. In times like the present, it is folly to conduct a large business on any but cash principles. For a period of excitement and speculation such as the present is sure to be followed by one of depression, when failures are abundant. The high price of gold leads some people to reason that it would be better for them to retain their goods, particularly those in bond, until a better season, or to export them for sale in foreign markets, where gold will be paid in exchange.

EPISCOPAL GENERAL CONVENTION.

Second Day's Session.

The General Triennial Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church reassembled yesterday morning, at St. John's Chapel. Bishop Hopkins, of Vermont, conducted the morning service, after which Rev. Dr. Vinton, of Trinity Church, occupied special pews for the Bishops. Some time was spent in interchanging friendly greetings among the Bishops, clergy and laity, and at 11½ o'clock the Convention was called to order by Rev. James Craik, D. D., of Kentucky; and the Secretary, Geo. M. Randall, D. D., of Boston, called the roll. In answer to an inquiry, the Secretary said that only those Dioceses had been called from which certificates had been received. Mr. Rhodes suggested that the remaining Dioceses be called, whereupon the Secretary called for delegates from Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee and Kansas, but from none of them was there any response.

Rev. Tho. Eason, of Massachusetts, and Hon. Luther Bradish, of New-York, were delegated by the President to wait upon the House of Bishops, and inform them that the clerical and lay delegates were ready for business.

The following Committees were then appointed by the President:

On Elections—Rev. Dr. G. M. Randall, Massachusetts; Rev. Dr. Miles Mahan, New-Jersey; Rev. Dr. G. E. Hare, Pennsylvania; Rev. John A. Wilson, Michigan; Rev. Crosswell Doane, New-Jersey; Mr. J. R. Bee, Wisconsin; Mr. R. T. Wilder, Minnesota; Mr. Wm. Welsh, Pennsylvania; Mr. S. M. Cullit, Delaware.

On the State of the Church—Rev. Alexander Burgess, of Maine; Rev. Dr. J. H. Eames, New-Hampshire; Rev. Dr. G. B. Manser, Vermont; Rev. Dr. T. Edson, of Massachusetts; Rev. Dr. S. A. Crane, Rhode Island; Rev. Dr. R. A. Hallam, Connecticut; Rev. F. Vinton, New-York; Rev. Dr. W. D. Wilson, Western New-York; Rev. Mr. Jas. Kelly, New-Jersey; Rev. G. E. Hone, Pennsylvania; Rev. Chas. Breck, Delaware; Rev. Dr. Wm. Pinckney, Maryland; Rev. F. M. Whittle, Kentucky; Rev. Dr. E. Burr, Ohio; Rev. F. B. Wakefield, Indiana; Rev. J. N. Morrison, Illinois; Rev. Dr. M. Schuyler, Missouri; Rev. Daniel Griswold, Michigan; Rev. Dr. W. B. Ashley, Wisconsin; Rev. Dr. Silas Totten, Iowa; Rev. D. B. Knickerbocker, Minnesota; Rev. Dr. S. C. Thrall, California.

On the Prayer Book.—Rev. Dr. H. M. Mason, Maryland; Rev. Dr. E. Waterman, Rhode Island; Rev. Dr. R. A. Hallam, Connecticut; Rev. Dr. S. F. Parker, Massachusetts; Rev. Dr. Edward Neville, New-Jersey; Isaac Redfield, LL.D., Massachusetts; Hon. Luther Bradish, New-York; Lan. Anderson, Esq., Connecticut; Prof. Geo. C. Shattuck, M. D., Massachusetts.

On the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States.—Rev. Dr. Howe, Pennsylvania, Chairman; Rev. Dr. F. Vinton, New-York; Rev. Dr. J. L. Clark, Connecticut; Rev. Dr. E. F. Berkely, Missouri; Rev. Dr. George Leeds, Pennsylvania; Hon. R. H. Gardiner, Missouri; Hon. S. H. Huntington, Connecticut; H. F. Baldwin, Esq., Michigan, and William Cornwall.

On New Dioceses.—Rev. Drs. Smallwood, of Ohio; Cole, of Wisconsin; Rev. Messrs. Edell, of Vermont; Manney, of Minnesota; Clemson, of Delaware; Messrs. Churchill, of Kentucky; Brunot, of Pennsylvania; Julian, of Western New-York; Beyer, of Iowa.

On Consecration of Bishops.—Rev. Drs. Beach, of Western New-York; Taft, of Rhode Island; Washburn, of Connecticut; Rev. Mr. Durrell, of Maine; Rev. President Goodwin, of Pennsylvania; Messrs. Trowbridge, of Michigan; Garthwaite, of New-Jersey; Read, of Delaware; and Jarvis, of Ohio.

On the Constitution and Canons of the Church.—Rev. Drs. W. Cooper Mead, Connecticut; F. L. Hawks, New-York; W. A. DeWolfe Howe, Pennsylvania; E. V. Higbee, New-York; R. H. Clarkson, Illinois; Hon. E. F. Chambers, Pennsylvania; Murray Hoffman, New-York; R. C. Winthrop, Massachusetts; J. M. Conyngham, Pennsylvania.

On the General Theological Seminary.—Rev. Drs. Wm. E. Wyatt, Maryland; W. E. Shelton, Western New-York; N. Hopper, Massachusetts; Rev. Mr. Lawson Carter, Ohio; Herman Cope, Esq., Pennsylvania; Hon. Washington Hunt, Western New-York; S. B. Ruggles, New-York; Joseph R. Sheffield, Esq., Connecticut.

On Expenses of the Convention.—Rev. E. Gardiner, Maine; W. E. Armitage, Wisconsin; Daniel Crenshaw, Rhode Island; Z. A. Kemper, Wisconsin; Rev. Dr. J. G. Hubbard, New-Hampshire; Messrs. Herman Cope, Pennsylvania; J. H. Thompson, New-Jersey; Antrim Campbell, Illinois; S. P. Beers, Connecticut.

On Unfinished Business.—Rev. H. A. Coit, New-Hampshire; M. Douglas, Vermont; S. Bronkie, Delaware; Rev. Drs. E. W. Peet, Iowa; T. T. Worthington, Wisconsin; Messrs. Ide, of New-Hampshire; Aldis, of Vermont; Alexander Duncan, of Rhode Island; and Irwin, of Indiana.

On motion of Mr. Rutfield, the question of the division of Dioceses boundaries was referred to the Committee on New Dioceses.

Canons 1, 2, 3 and 4, 5 and 6, were on motion referred to the Committee on Canons.

Rev. Dr. Vinton proposed an alteration in the Prayer-book, which was opposed by Rev. Dr. Hawks, who warned the brethren against tampering with that book, which next to the Word of God was the great standard authority of the Church. If the Church was ever to be reunited, he [illegible] would be by the Prayer Book.

Judge Mellen, of Massachusetts, opposed the modelling with the Prayer-book, and he was satisfied there was no error in the edition supervised by Bishop White.

Dr. Vinton explained that the change which he was about to suggest was only in reference to a typographical error.

Rev. Mr. Pinney, of Maine, said he had carefully examined the old Prayer-books, and he was satisfied there was no error in the edition supervised by Bishop White.

After some further remarks from Dr. Hawks, the subject was laid on the table.

Hon. Benjamin C. Wilmarth, of Boston, then addressed the Convention, pouring a glowing tribute to the memory of the late Hon. Wm. J. Appleton, of Boston, and Hon. Edward A. Newton, of Pittsfield, and closing with the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, By the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies that we cannot fail to miss from his long accustomed seat in our councils, the late Hon. Edward A. Newton, of Massachusetts, and that we are unwilling that his name should disappear from the rolls of the Convention without an expression of the deep regret with which we heard the announcement of his death, and of the sincere respect which we entertain for his memory.

On motion of Rev. Dr. Mead, of Connecticut, the Secretary was instructed to have 3,000 copies of the sermon preached at the opening of the Convention, printed for the use of members.

The Convention adjourned to 9 o'clock this morning.

MILITARY AFFAIRS ON GOVERNOR'S ISLAND.

Completion of the New Military Hospital—Duties of Col. Lomax, Dr. Sloan, &c.

Military matters at Governor's Island deserve attention at the present time. The troops on the Island do not amount to a large number, yet the correct attention of the officers and men to their duties is worthy of commendation. The parades are strictly attended to, and the guards regularly mounted, whilst the conduct of the troops is everything that could be desired. In fact the greatest order and regularity appear to prevail in every department of this well-regulated fortress.

One great desideratum—and which was much needed—has been satisfactorily brought to a completion, namely, the finishing of the new Military Hospital for the sick and wounded troops that may arrive there by order of the Government. The new additions which have been added are of a very extensive nature, and have been finished with a view of giving the amplest comfort and accommodation to those brave fellows who have nobly taken their part in the present war. The entire Hospital has been regularly cleansed and furnished since the new additions were made, and the apartments are exceedingly commodious and well ventilated; and everything connected with the hospital is of a very excellent nature, so as to afford the necessary comforts which the wounded and sick soldiers require, a number of whom are there at the present time.

In the perfect completion of this asylum for the sick and wounded troops, Col. Lomax has bestowed much attention to it in the regular discharge of his duties as Commandant of the Island and Fort Columbus. The Medical Superintendent, Dr. Sloan, has also made it a part of his business, both in regard to Governor's Island as well as Bedloe's, to not only make particular inquiry as to how the troops have been treated on the passage, but to have their wants immediately attended to on their arrival. The hospital is one of the best conducted that can be found.

Amusements.

Niblo's Garden.—Mr. Forrest made his first appearance this season on Monday in "King Lear." Of all the Shakespearian characters that he personates Lear is generally allowed to be the one in which he can be seen to the most striking advantage. Even in the time when it was thought to be the correct thing to deny, in a comprehensive sort of way, that Mr. Forrest possessed either talent or genius for the portrayal of the higher order of dramatic passion, an exception was usually made in favor of his Lear; which hostile criticism acknowledged to be a creation of rare power, wherein the beauties far outbalanced the defects. Popular opinion has always regarded it as one of the grandest performances ever heaped upon the stage—quite sufficient, of itself, to stamp Mr. Forrest the foremost actor of his generation. Popular opinion is better than criticism, after all, inasmuch as it fills theatres and demonstrates itself enthusiastically in applause. Mr. Forrest has found that out long ago, and he has wisely modeled his style according to the dictates of the judgment in which he finds the largest number of people concur. It is sufficient to say of Mr. Forrest's performance that it has lost none of its former attractions, though it has mellowed and improved with age. The three daughters of the unfortunate old monarch are ably represented by Madame Pierri, Miss Wells and Mrs. Glancy Jones.

Tuesday evening (it being one of the nights when Mr. Hackett plays instead of Mr. Forrest,) a singularly interesting revival took place. Mackin's comedy, "The Man of the World," was given, for the first time in many years, and went off so well as to warrant its repetition, whenever an actor can be found capable of sustaining the part of Sir Pertinax Macsycophant. So far as the actual knowledge of the majority of modern playgoers extends, Mr. Hackett is the only American actor at present possessing that capacity. Apparently, there is only one actor in England also—Mr. Phelps—who has courage enough to undertake the part. In the long period—nearly a century—since the piece was first produced, not more than half-a-dozen leading performers have thought it advisable to try their hands at it. Of those who have done so, tradition transmits to us the names of its author, and of George Frederick Cooke, as preeminently successful. Of other experimenters with it history says little or nothing.

The comedy is a clever one, neglected though it may have been. The character of Sir Pertinax is shrewdly drawn. He is an unscrupulous, adroit old politician, who believes the best way to tread in great men's footsteps is to lick their boots; who believes in shuffling and shirking, in toadying and toufhunting, in butter and buncombe, to elevate him in the social scale, and who com

The City Bounty to Recruits.

Yesterday, the Mayor approved the resolution, making an extension and continuance of the bounty term for recruits from the 24th ult. to the 9th inst. Comptroller HAWS, however, chose not to pay out the bill to each man as promptly as before. Having discovered that great frauds have been practiced, both here and in Brooklyn, on the special bounty funds, he is determined to exercise caution sufficient to prevent any further repetition of them, so far as this City is concerned. He has found that collusions existed between Adjutants of regiments and recruiting officers, by which men have been enlisted over and over again, and each time under a different name, and, perhaps, different name.

Parties concerned in such transactions have come forward and given enough information on the subject to enable a thorough investigation to be prosecuted, and the results, if any, will be the showing up of a numerous lot of military rascals, who, under the guise of patriotism, have been carrying on the craft of consummate and hardened accumulators. For obvious reasons, the parties presenting the facts so far reported, as well as the facts themselves, are withheld for the present. By-and-by, however, an expose may be made that will astonish some of the parties concerned, who suppose themselves safe from suspicion of guilt in the matter. The Comptroller has taken the pains to put persons on the track of these greenback swamps. Their machinations to defraud the public funds have rendered it necessary that a new system of distribution shall be adopted. For the present, therefore, the bounty will be paid only to recruits enlisted into old regiments in the field, and not until they are about departing from the City, and can show transportation orders verifying the fact. Under these conditions, a few payments were made yesterday afternoon.

In regard to the payment of the bounty to new regiments, it is likely that arrangements will be made to pay them at their camps, just before leaving for the seat of war, instead of paying them singly and in squads, at the Comptroller's office, as this business was formerly managed. This, no doubt, will have the effect of preventing men from cutting and recutting the bounty more than once. Heretofore the fears of the Comptroller in respect to frauds by re-enlisting men have been some of them wholly deserted polluted in Brooklyn or elsewhere out of New-York. Pains will now be taken to request officers to keep men in camp, and not give them furloughs, unless in cases where they felt thoroughly assured that the recruits were men of honor and integrity. Many officers respected this request, and carried out right rules in observance of it; but there were some cases where recently subordinate officers would manage to let their accomplices in the ranks pass the guard in order to forward themselves and obtain more bounties. It is marvelous that men could pass the medical Inspectors repeatedly. If such a thing be at all feasible, it is a short-sited business, for such mistakes after the statement of facts, unpleasant suspicion might rest upon them, however conscientious they may be in the discharge of their duties.

Unknown Post-Office—Interesting Official Correspondence.

The plan of having a post-office up town, originating in the year 1856, was revived early last Summer, when the Common Council directed the Mayor to open a correspondence with the Postmaster-General, with the view of securing the location of a post-office in the vicinity of Broadway and Sixth-avenue. Accordingly, on the 26th of last June, the Mayor addressed a lengthy letter to the Post-office Department, elaborately setting forth the great need of a post-office in that vicinity, and adverting to the fact that it has always been the policy of the Department to encourage the establishment of a new Post-office at the distance of three miles from one already established, when there was every likelihood of a new office being self-supporting. According to this custom of the Department, the people of this City undoubtedly had a right to have an up-town Post-office at that distance from the present one, and the location selected by the Common Council, as desirable for another, was that far away from the old Post-office. Our claims to the additional postal facilities requested, however, were not founded so much upon these facts, as they were upon the wants of the great body of the up-town population in respect to mail communication. And the Mayor did not fail to describe the present postal advantages, together with the many disadvantages and inadequacies of local deliveries and collections.

The communication not having been answered up to the 26th of last month, the Mayor, on that day, addressed another letter to the Postmaster-General, requesting a reply to the first. A few days afterwards he received the following:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 26, 1862.

Sir: I am instructed by the Postmaster-General to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th inst., and to say that your communication of the 26th June last, was placed on file for action in the ordinary course of business. He regrets that its receipt in the department should not have been acknowledged at the time, which would have been done had the communication been brought to his personal attention. He instructs me further to say, in reply to both communications, that he does not deem it expedient at this time to grant the application for a post-office in the place indicated, for the reason, among others, that he has under consideration a plan for a general free delivery of letters in cities and towns, which, if adopted by Congress, as he hopes it will be, will, in this case, afford all the facilities the public can reasonably desire, without the establishment of a new office in New-York.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
ST. JOHN B. L. SKINNER,
Acting First Assistant Postmaster-General.
Hon. Gideon Ottman, Mayor of New-York City.

The Mayor replied to this, that if the plan in view should include the free collection as well as delivery of letters, it would to a great extent obviate the necessity of an up-town Post-office. The entire correspondence on the subject has been sent to the Common Council, and will come up for reading and action in the course of the proceedings of the Aldermen to-day.

Friends' Seminary.

An institution little known beyond a certain circle of our quiet citizens has been, for a year past, in full progress of successful operation. A most substantial and commodious building of three stories in height, opposite the Friends or Quaker Meeting-house on Rutherford-place, and is known as the Friends' Seminary. It is conducted upon principles somewhat differing from those which apply in our public schools, although between them and it exists the most cordial sympathy. The building is subdivided into large commodious rooms with wide roomy adjoining lecture-rooms, with laboratory completely furnished with every apparatus for the elucidation of lectures upon the various sciences, while the main hall lend to provoke with maps, charts, electrical apparatus, an air pump of mammoth dimensions and a model steam engine, all of which regulates are brought to bear for the benefit of the young idea how to shoot. The first lecture of the season took place last night. Lectures of ability are to be selected and invited to deliver discourses to the various departments once a fortnight. There are wardrobe rooms (models in their way) for boys and girls respectively. The cribs are ventilated together, though apart from them distinct from each other.

The play-ground is in common; in fact, the whole of the premises, public part (theyrent), lying attached to the dwelling of the Principal, [illegible] school-room, [illegible] the location is evidently the most desirable possible, for every window view is a delight of delights. The lofty [illegible] yard spreads out from the rear towards the southern wall. Still more on the best development occurs upon Fourteenth-street, where there is the school yard, [illegible] the other play ground, with and [illegible] space [illegible] guard over it. On the eastern side, [illegible] with the on [illegible] boys, in the lovely lake and street and promenade of Stuyvesant Park, and in front in [illegible] grandeur, reveals the gothic arches and [illegible] belfry of St. George's—Dr. Tyng's Church. The class of children who patronize the school appreciate their choice surroundings, and present an appearance in keeping with order and good taste.

Everything about the academic department is perfect, the contrary to all ornament not associated with the beautiful. Great globes mounted upon handsome bronze stands hold dignified posts each side of the Principal's desk. Cotsen's largest maps are suspended upon the side walls. The desks, chairs, &c., are of the latest and best design. The classification of the pupils is attended to with great care. The course embraces a thorough routine of academic instruction, including the languages and drawing and painting.

A marked feature of this school is the introduction of elocution as an essential branch of education. The elocution differs somewhat from schools in general, in that it is sought to be more parental. Beside the usual Board of Trustees, elected from among our most responsible men, is an additional element of women trustees, as it is called in their classic language, in reference to the admirable adaptation of this school to the rapid march of intellectual improvement among us, the symmetric development should not be overlooked. Here, in the space of two large rooms, are to be found every appurtenance for the development of the physique. The experiment of establishing a Friends' Seminary, (though its classes are open to all,) with a tariff of prices which should make it self-sustaining, was at first appreciated, but everything has gone to show that a wise foresight suggested it, for it has proved successful beyond all expectations. More scholars apply than can be accommodated with places. The whole is under the immediate supervising of Prof. THOMAS PYNAN.

GENERAL NEW-YORK NEWS.

PAYMENT OF THE BOUNTY AT CAMP SCOTT.—The payment of the bounty to the troops at Camp Scott, Staten Island, has given the greatest satisfaction to the troops at present stationed there, and has inspired them with a degree of confidence in the United States Government which has had the effect of causing a great number of fresh recruits to join the service. It is, however, to be regretted that there are found some who do not fully appreciate indulgent consideration of the Government, as many, after having received the bounty payment, have left the camp without the regular permission of the commanding officer to obtain a pass from the proper quarter; however, this is supposed to be a kind of desire to visit their families and have the bounty with them which has been so liberally paid. This was found to be the case on Saturday last, but we apprehend that they will not long absent themselves from their different corps, but will at once return to camp, where the greatest activity seems to be going on to send troops forward to the seat of war. Since Gen. CORCORAN took up his quarters at the camp, large numbers of new recruits have flocked in to join his legion, and much credit has attended the raising of his Legion Brigade, that it will be drafted to the seat of war so soon as its full quota has been made up.

SCENES AT THE BATTERY INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.—The severity of the weather did not prevent the children of the Battery Industrial School of the Children's Aid Society, from assembling, with their parents, in their large and well-lighted room, corner of Whitehall and State streets, on Wednesday evening. A number of visitors were present, and the meeting was addressed by Messrs. E. TRUMP, Capt. MACY, A. L. SMITH, and Revs. Mr. HEIR and M. DU PUY. The physical and moral improvement apparent in these children was very gratifying to those present, and as the children sang and recited the various pieces selected for the occasion, the eyes of their jubilant mothers, and, indeed, of all who were happy enough to be present, expressed a strong sympathy and gladness in their intelligent progress. Cakes and other refreshments were amply given. The great want of the children is clothing. We were sorry to see them so poorly fenced against chill, rainy weather. The best gift the school could receive, would be something of this sort. Warm dresses, or the material for them, would be gratefully received at the school, corner of State and Whitehall streets.

ARTISTS' SALE OF PAINTINGS.—The first artists' paintings for the season was commenced at the auction rooms of HENRY C. SCHERMER, No. 111 Nassau-street, yesterday. Owing to the unfavorable weather, the attendance was small, and after knocking down 38 pieces, mostly at a great sacrifice, out of a catalogue of 91 paintings, the auctioneer adjourned the sale until Wednesday morning, Oct. 8, at 11 o'clock. The collection comprises specimens of nearly all the best American artists, contributed especially for this sale, and picture buyers and connoisseurs should not fail to be present the day the sale is resumed. Among the sales, yesterday, was "Mercy's Dream," by D. M. CARTER, which was knocked down to Mr. HOGPAN for $300. "Finishing the Cosy," a large fine painting, by W. G. HAYS, executed to order for $800, was sold for $85. A "Winter Scene," by Louis R. MEANY, brought $90, and a "Sunset on the Catskills," by R. L. PEYE, $50. The remaining paintings on the catalogue, 53 in number, can be seen at the auction rooms on any day previous to the sale.

BANVARD ON THE FLOW OF THE MISSISSIPPI.—The names of BANVARD and Mississippi have for many years been closely allied. Mr. BANVARD has made that noble river the subject of study, close and careful, for the better part of his life; and by his explorations and observations, has won for himself the universally recognized title of "the authority" on all matters connected therewith. Last night, by special invitation, he delivered before the American Geographical and Statistical Society of this City, at their rooms in Clinton Hall, a most interesting and able address, on "The Flow of the Mississippi," the matter of which was strikingly illustrated by diagrams. Our space forbids a more than notice of the paper, which was admirably written, full of point, vigor and interest. A vote of thanks was passed by the Society for the evening's entertainment.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO A STAGE DRIVER.—CHAS. E. SULLIVAN, a driver of stage No. 3 of the Bowery and Grand-street line, was run over yesterday by his own stage, at the corner of Pearl and Chatham streets, and almost instantly killed. The deceased was conveyed to the New-York Hospital, where Coroner RANKEN held an inquest. From the evidence adduced it appears that SULLIVAN was endeavoring to get his stage out of the way of a car, when the wheels of his vehicle fell into a rut, and the sudden motion produced by getting out, threw him from his seat to the pavement, and one wheel of the stage passed over his head, crushing it in a horrible manner. The jury rendered a verdict of accidental death. The deceased was 21 years of age, and a native of Whitehall in this State.

RECRUITING CLERGYMEN.—War meetings for the aid of sundry companies of the Ironsides Regiment were held in various localities last night. The Churches have taken hold of the matter with determined will, and the ranks are fast filling up. At the South Baptist Church, Rev. Dr. BURLINGHAM, Rev. Dr. GILLETTE, and Rev. Mr. KALLOCH made short, pithy, stirring speeches, which did the audience, the cause, and the regiment much good. Rev. T. R. SMITH, recently returned from Europe, addressed a large audience in the Allen-street Presbyterian Church on the topic of the hour, and THEO. THEON, Dr. HATFIELD, and others spoke in the Church of the Puritans in behalf of the Monitor Company of the Ironsides.

WAR MEETING.—Last night in the Thirty-fourth-street Church, between the Eighth and Ninth avenues, for the benefit of Capt. WEDNARD'S Ironsides Company, there was held a grand war meeting. Rev. Mr. SPARKS, Dr. HAWS and Prof. INGRAM, spoke ably and eloquently in favor of the organization and of the good result to be expected from bodies of young men brought together under such cheerful auspices, for the country's good. An enthusiastic meeting preceded, and Capt. WEDNARD'S recruiting-office, at Continental Hall, will undoubtedly show the effects of the meeting.

UNKNOWN WOMAN DROWNED.—Coroner COLLIS held an inquest, yesterday, upon the body of an unknown woman, aged about 40 years, who was found in the Harlem River, near the bridge, late on Wednesday afternoon. The deceased was dressed in a brown calico dress, light figured shawl, straw bonnet trimmed with green ribbon, checked apron, two quilted petticoats, white and black stripe, other brown, white stockings and leather gaiters. A cross and beads were around her neck. Verdict—Death by drowning.

MORE CONNECTICUT TROOPS.—The Twenty-second Regiment Connecticut Volunteers, Col. CHAPLIN, commanding, left Hartford yesterday afternoon by steamer, and will arrive in this City at an early hour this morning. The regiment will land at Pier No. 2 North River, and after breakfasting at the Barracks on the Battery, will proceed at once to its sphere of duty.

FERNANDO WOOD ON THE SLUGGER.—To-night, before the Nineteenth Ward Seymour Association, Ex-Mayor FERNANDO WOOD will give his views upon political affairs in general and the Gubernatorial contest in particular. The Hall is in Fifty-ninth-street, near the Third-avenue.

LECTURES ON GUNSHOT WOUNDS.—Dr. RAPHAEL will deliver the second lecture in his course, on gunshot wounds, to-day, at 12 M., at the New-York Medical College, in Thirteenth-street.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

THE EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION OF THE PRESIDENT.—At a special meeting of the Republican General Committee on Wednesday night, Mr. WM. L. HUNSILL, of the Twelfth Ward, offered the following resolutions in approval of the Emancipation Proclamation, and indorsing the recent Republican State nominations. The resolutions were adopted by acclamation:

Resolved, That we unreservedly and unqualifiedly approve of the late proclamation of the President of the United States.

Resolved, That we hail with joy the nomination of Gov. JAMES S. WADSWORTH for Governor of the State of New-York by the late Republican Union State Convention, and cruelly accept him as our standard-bearer in the coming political contest, confident that the loyalty and patriotism of the people of the Empire State will nobly respond, and roll up a majority for the ticket that shall alike gladden and strengthen the hearts of patriots all over the land, as well as rebuke and confound the semi-traitors in our midst, who would gladly clog the wheels of Government in its herculean efforts to crush out and destroy the existing rebellion.

Resolved, That the nomination of LYMAN TRUMAN for Lieutenant-Governor, OLIVER LAMB for Canal Commissioner, ANDREAS WILLMAN for State Prison inspector, and CHARLES HUGHES for Clerk of Appeals, are alike gratifying and acceptable to the loyal and patriotic Republicans of Kings County; and we hereby pledge our earnest and continued labors and undivided support to the success of the ticket from this time until the closing of the polls on the evening of 4th of November next.

THE BROOKLYN CHESS CLUB.—The regular annual meeting of this association was held last evening at their new room at the Hicksite House, No. 2 Montague-street, on which occasion the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: President, F. PERRIN; Vice-President, G. E. HALL; Secretary, Mr. CORNELL; Treasurer, A. A. THOMPSON. The opening night of the Club is fixed for Saturday evening, Oct. 4. Hereafter, the rooms will be opened to members and special guests of the Club only, every afternoon and evening, from 4 o'clock to 12.

THE BOUNTY FRAUD CASE.—The parties implicated in the attempt to obtain money from the County Bounty Committee, by falsely representing that they had enlisted in the Ironsides Regiment, were again brought before Justice FEARY, yesterday. Several witnesses were examined, when the case was adjourned until this morning.

MILITIA REGIMENT ACCEPTED.—The Fifty-second Regiment Militia has been accepted by Gov. MORGAN for nine months' service. The headquarters are at Montague Hall, in Court near Joralemon-street, where all desiring to aid in filling up the ranks are invited to call.

THE REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES.—The Kings County Republican General Committee have designated the 10th inst. as the day for holding primary meetings to elect delegates to the Congressional Assembly, City and County nominating Conventions. The Conventions will be held on the 13th, 14th and 15th instant.

Which was concurred in.

Preamble reciting that the remains of Hugh McNeil, Colonel of the Pennsylvania Buckteils, who fell near Sharpsburgh, Maryland, and Brigadier-General Mansfield, who also fell in the recent battles in Maryland, are expected to pass through this City, with resolution that the Committee on National Affairs be directed to take charge of their reception, and cause them to lie in state in the Governor's Room.

Which was concurred in.

Resolution that the sum of one hundred and ninety-eight dollars and twenty-five cents, be appropriated for the expenses attending the reception of Charles West, Esq., and that the Comptroller be directed to pay the amount upon the presentation of proper vouchers.

Which was laid over.

Report of Committee on Assessments, with resolution that the Comptroller be directed to draw his warrant in favor of J. C. Dutcher, Pastor of the Union Reformed Dutch Church, (located in Sixth-avenue, opposite Amity-street,) for the sum of two hundred and forty-three dollars, for the purpose of enabling him to pay an assessment against said church for paving Sixth-avenue, and charge the same to the account of donations.

Which was referred to Committee on Donations and Charities.

Report of Committee on Assessments, with resolution that the Clerk of Arrears be directed to receive the sum of one hundred and seventy-four dollars and fifty cents, without interest, in full payment of a certain assessment, for regulating One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, as proved by the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty, on the twelfth day of December, Eighteen Hundred and Fifty-nine, on a certain lot of ground located on the north side of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, two hundred and seventy-five feet west of Eighth-avenue, and known on said assessment map by the Number Seventy-nine, and on the Twelfth Ward map by the Number Twenty-one.

Which was concurred in by the following vote:

Affirmative—Councilmen Hogan, Barney, Hayes, Healy, Desmond, Jones, Ryan, Gross, Reppen, Webster, Hazelton, Gedney, Keech, Lent, Orton, Ross, Stevenson, The President, Babcock, Snyder, Brice, Long—24.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

We do not learn that any new movement was made by the Army of the Potomac, yesterday. The President is on a visit to Gen. McCLELLAN'S headquarters, and will remain until to-morrow.

The address of the loyal Governors to the President, adopted at the Altoona meeting, is published this morning. A summary of its main features has already been given. Full support is pledged in the prosecution of the war to a successful issue, and the Emancipation Proclamation is cordially approved.

Gov. MORGAN yesterday issued a General Order authorizing the recruiting of nine-months' men until the order for drafting shall have been issued. The recruits under this order will be formed into companies, and will only be used to fill up regiments in the field. We learn from Albany that the State has already raised 20,000 three years' volunteers over her quota under the first call for three hundred thousand men.

MEAGHER'S Brigade, consisting entirely of Virginia troops, was in Pittsburgh on Tuesday evening, en route for Western Virginia.

With regard to the reported removal of Gen. BURSIDE from command in Kentucky, the Louisville Journal, of Tuesday, says: "It is reported that Gen. BURSIDE was yesterday relieved of his command of the Department of the Ohio, and Gen. THOMAS appointed to succeed him. Gen. THOMAS, however, telegraphed to Washington, and was backed by nearly all the other division officers, recommending the retention of Gen. BURSIDE. We are happy to state that the application was successful, and Gen. BURSIDE was restored to the command in which he has won the confidence of our people, and we are confident that he fully deserves it." Per contra, we find the following in the Louisville correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette: "A dispatch from Cincinnati is published here this morning, indicating that BURSIDE will be relieved. I know not what truth there may be in this, but I am aware of a strong and powerful and energetic organization of military and civil officers who feel it their duty to the country to labor for his removal, and who are busy in endeavoring to displace him. I am at liberty only to speak this much. The clamor against BURSIDE is great, and the feeling existing in the army is intense."

The Third Georgia Regiment, 480 strong, which was captured near New-Haven, Ky., arrived at Louisville on Oct. 1.

Advices received at headquarters, in St. Louis, and thought to be perfectly reliable, are to the effect that about seven thousand rebels, poorly armed, under McBAIRS, are entering the State of Missouri, by way of Pocohontas, Arkansas. McBAIRS, at present, is lying sick at the latter place. Reinforcements are being daily received by the rebels, and their army will soon probably number ten thousand strong. Abundant preparations to meet them have been made.

The troops paroled at Harper's Ferry, now at Camp Douglas, Chicago, whence they will be sent to Minnesota, are the following: "64th Illinois, 37th Ohio, 126 Ohio, 69th Ohio, 39th New-York, 110th New-York, 125th New-York, 12th New-York (militia;) Battery M, 1st Illinois, Capt. Phillips; Battery F, 5th New-York, Capt. McGrath; Battery —, 19th Indiana, Capt. Van Schaick; Independent Illinois Battery, Capt. Rigby; 19th Ohio Battery, Capt. Potts; 5th New-York Artillery, Capt. Grimm."

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer writes, under date of Sept. 29, off Charleston Harbor: "On the night of the 10th, a large side-wheel steamer, supposed to be the Hera, went to sea, sweeping past one of our helpless sailing vessels at the rate of thirteen or fourteen knots per hour. The sailing vessel gave the alarm, but it was too late for the only steamer in that neighborhood to follow her successfully. Of the particulars of her escape, you will learn in due time from Nassau. The rebel ran the blockade through Hatteras's Channel.

GENERAL NEWS.

The mails by the steamship Europa arrived in this City last evening from Boston. A telegraphic summary of the news, which is to the 21st ult., went forwarded from Cape Race, and published on Tuesday morning.

By the steamer which left San Francisco on the 1st inst., for Panama, sixty thousand dollars were forwarded for the National Sanitary Commission as an additional subscription from San Francisco alone. This amount will be increased by further City and State subscriptions.

The Triennial Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church continued its session at St. John's Chapel yesterday. The roll was called for delegates from the seceded States, but none answered to their names. The various Committees were appointed, and the Secretary was directed to cause 3,000 copies of the opening sermon of Bishop McCROSKEY to be printed for the use of the Convention. The deaths of Hon. W. J. APPLETON, of Boston, and Hon. EDWARD A. NEWTON, of Pittsfield, were appropriately noticed, and the Convention adjourned to 9 o'clock this morning.

Col. ANDREW JACKSON HAMILTON, of Texas, was most cordially received in Brooklyn last evening by a crowded audience, at the Academy of Music. He delivered a long and interesting speech, favoring the Union in preference to Slavery, and counselling the utmost cordiality in the support of the efforts of the President and the Government to put down the rebellion.

A large concourse of the most respectable colored people of this City came together last evening, in the Shiloh Church, corner of Marion and Prince streets, to do honor to ROBERT SMALLS, the "Hero of the Planter." Mr. J. H. TOWNSEND presided, and after a prayer by Rev. J. T. RAYMOND, by no means warmly thankful for the conditions of the recent Presidential proclamation, addresses were delivered by Rev. J. N. GLOUCESTER, Prof. W. J. WILSON, Rev. H. H. GARNET and others. A beautiful and costly gold medal, with an appropriate escutcheon and inscription, was presented to ROBERT SMALLS, who very becomingly narrated the history of his daring escape from Charleston Harbor with the steamer Planter. JOHN BROWN'S Hymn and other patriotic chaunts were finely sung by the choir, and the guest of the evening was overwhelmed with applause. The tone of the meeting, like all the colored convocations held since the Emancipation Edict, was decidedly opposed to all involuntary colonization schemes.

At the session of the Board of Councilmen last evening, a report in favor of donating $7,500 to the Blind Mechanics' Association, was presented and laid over. The Comptroller reported the receipts of the Sixth-avenue Railroad Company for the first eight months of the year, to have been $232,623 61, and those of the Eighth-avenue Railroad, for the same time, $144,281 89. A burlesque legal opinion was read on the abolishment of the Aldermen, exciting much laughter. Concurrence was had on the resolution appropriating $800 to obtain a sword, sash and belt for presentation to Gen CONCORAN. The proposition from the Aldermen to administer the oath of allegiance to the City employes, elicited a lengthy discussion on a proposed amendment to include a support of the Government as a part of the obligation. The subject was finally laid over and made the special order for the next meeting. The Board adjourned till next Monday afternoon.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Commerce was held yesterday, at 3 P. M. The only business of importance occurring was the consideration of a letter received from the Secretary of State, inclosing an extract from a dispatch transmitted to the Department by Mr. DAYTON, our Minister at Paris, in relation to the recent official circular concerning the price of labor and the emoluments of the military service in the United States. Mr. DAYTON, in view of the immense immigration likely to be thereby encouraged, recommends lower charges for the transatlantic passage. These communications were referred to a Special Committee.

There are now ten thousand nine months' men in camp in various parts of Massachusetts, but they are not yet recruited to the maximum standard, and will not leave for the seat of war till proper shelter and clothing are provided for them by the General Government.

It has been decided by the War Department that the commutation to the persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms, and thus exempted by the Constitution of Indiana, will be two hundred dollars.

Quite an exciting scene was witnessed at Camp Dutchess, near Poughkeepsie, on Tuesday last, when the soldiers there, indignant at the impositions practiced by the keepers of the booths outside of the camp, and at their selling liquor, turned the establishments inside out, knocked in the heads of the lager-beer and whisky casks, and tumbled all the substantials into the Falkill. No one was allowed to appropriate any of the spoils.

The Insurance Companies of Hartford, Conn., have agreed to assume the war tax of 1 per cent. recently levied by Congress on all premiums received, and also the tax of 3 per cent. upon all dividends made by Insurance Companies. There was also a tax of 25 cents made upon all policies and every renewal of a policy issued, and this the Companies of Hartford have agreed shall be paid by the parties insured. Orders conformable to the above have been issued by all the city Companies to their agents.

The Boston Journal publishes a table of the dividends of the Boston banks, and says: "All the dividends are net to the stockholders for the amount declared, each bank paying the tax of 3 per cent. to the Government, in addition. The banks place to the credit of dividend account such a sum as will leave the amount to be paid to the stockholders after taxing from it the 3 per cent. tax. That is, a bank of $1,000,000 capital, and declaring 3 per cent., would place to dividend account the sum of $30,927 83, from which take 3 per cent., and we have precisely $30,000 for the stockholders. This is according to the strict letter of the law."

There was less excitement in the Stock market yesterday. Government Stocks were higher, and so were some of the Railways, but the General list was less animated in the afternoon. Gold fell to 122 ⅞ cent. Exchange about 136 ⅞ cent.

Heavy sales of Flour were made yesterday, at advanced prices. Wheat and Corn were sold freely, but at a decline of 1c. ⅞ bushel. Provisions were in good request, especially Pork, which was dearer. A moderate business was transacted in Sugars, Cotton, Whisky, Hops, Tallow and East India Rice, at former quotations. Rio Coffee was in brisk demand, and was higher. The Freight market was buoyant, although engagements were not very extensive.

The Confidence Democracy.

There is an assurance at once imposing and refrigerant in the pretences with which the Seymour Party submit to the people the petition to have the business of subduing rebellion transferred from the hands of the Administration to their own. Mr. LINCOLN'S Government, they say, has proved its utter inadequacy to the task. The war languishes. The country clamors for greater energy. Intrust to the National Democrats the business of enforcing the laws, and they will show how well and sternly, and speedily the thing will be done.

There are, unhappily, a variety of reasons, one of which is quite sufficient at present, why this confidence game is like to be a failure.

A Democratic Administration has already shown the extent of its ability in the cause in which it moves a new trial. There were four months between the election and the inauguration of Mr. LINCOLN. During that time the country was under a Democratic Administration; and during that time the rebellion grew from helpless infancy to be an armed giant, before whom the unarmed strength of the loyal North started back in affright. It was in the power of the Democratic Administration to have arrested, at any moment, the coming calamity. The people demanded that it should be arrested. Action was implored from one end of the country to the other; from the loyalists of Texas to the loyalists of Maine. But it was only when the conspiracy had reached its full proportions; was ready at every point for successful offensive movements; when it had appropriated arsenals and naval stations, and forts and treasure, that any semblance of energy was exhibited by the Democratic Administration; but even that energy was unproductive of a single measure looking to the forcible suppression of an open insurrection. When Mr. LINCOLN came into office he found the National authority thrown aside and defied in one-third of the Union; and yet not one man had been armed to restore and enforce it. His predecessor had merely held the loyalty of the nation by the throat until treason should have its perfect work. To restore to power the men which had thus acquiesced in the immolation of the Union—who, so far from exhibiting zeal to defend it, or indignation at its assailants, made no secret of their sympathy with the traitors, and openly recommended an acceptance of the so-called rebel constitution, instead of the sacred instrument for which we fight—would be an excess of weakness only equalled by the audacity of the political leaders who make the demand. We say political leaders, for the rank and file of the Democratic party have never wavered, and, we firmly believe, will not now waver, in their devotion to the Union. They rushed at the first battle call, to swell the ranks of the army. They have poured out noble blood, in the patriotic cause upon every battle-field of the war. They will be remembered by a grateful posterity not as partisans, but as citizens of an endangered republic, who, forgetting party and all else but their country, offered their lives freely and lavishly for the good cause. But far otherwise the leaders who now endeavor to bring the machinery of party to bear, in order to strengthen the enemy, whom the noble men we describe are to meet in many a desperate contest. They stood godfathers to treason at its secret nativity. They had delegates and representatives at Montgomery, attending the several caucuses in which the rebellion was planned. They were admitted to the inner penetralia of the conspiracy, had definite parts assigned them in developing it; and as it was developed, and while the country stood aghast at the crime attempted, heartily congratulated themselves on the success of their accomplices. It was only when they discovered that the masses of the Democratic party could not be brought to play the rôle they had pledged them to; in short, that the people, regardless of party, were resolved to preserve the Union, that they consented to postpone the fulfillment of the obligations they had assumed towards YANCEY, DAVIS, and their fellows. They have not postponed them long enough. The Fall of 1862 is too near the Winter of 1861, for the attempt to succeed. It will be necessary to wait until BUCHANAN'S Administration is forgotten, and the ill-disguised treason of the present Democratic leaders is covered somewhat less thinly with the rust of time, before the people can be deluded into placing a VALLANDIGHAM, or a WOOD, or a SEYMOUR, in the stead of ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Colonization of Blacks in Florida.

The subject of colonizing the blacks of the Southern States that are so rapidly becoming free through the operation of the war, is engaging very general attention, and has already led to the development of several plans of more or less merit. The Government of Denmark has applied for several thousand "contrabands," as these persons for present convenience are called; the Island of Hayti, through responsible agents, is seeking to draw a portion thither; Liberia claims, as Africa's right, all her children to be returned to her; Senator POMEROY, of Kansas, is organizing a colony, which he proposes to plant in Central America; and, now, Mr. ELI THAYER, well known for his practical philanthropy, comes forward with a proposition to make Florida, a State of our own Union, the home of the enfranchised blacks.

Without committing ourselves to any of the plans yet proposed for disposing of the Southern blacks that shall be freed by the war, we confess that we are impressed more favorably by that of Mr. THAYER than any of the others. He proposes to take Florida, a part of our domain, covered by our own Constitution and laws, contiguous to the States afflicted with Slavery, and to make it the land of Canaan to the race that is now going forth from their house of bondage. There are many strong and obvious reasons in favor of this scheme, drawn from considerations of national wealth and power, public economy, comity and humanity.

The mention of the State of Florida does not carry with it a very favorable impression on the public mind. We have come to regard its territory as nearly valueless; we know its long Indian wars were the occasion of enormous and iniquitous waste of the national wealth; and we have long felt that the introduction of Florida into the family of States was a perfidious trick of the Slavepower to perpetuate their dynasty. We shall find, perhaps, that the political aversions generated by the admission of Florida into the Union, have led the country to do injustice to the extent and value of its territory.

The State of New-York comprises 46,000 square miles, or 29,440,000 acres. The State of Pennsylvania comprises 47,000 square miles, or 30,080,000 acres. The State of Ohio comprises 39,964 square miles, or 25,576,960 acres. The State of Florida comprises 59,268 square miles, or 37,931,520 acres. Thus it will be seen that Florida is much larger, territorially, than either of the three most populous States of the North. Its extent in square miles is almost the same as that of the three States together—Connecticut, New-York and New-Jersey, which contained, in 1860, a population of five million three hundred and thirteen thousand and eight souls. Florida has area enough, it is plain, for every slave in America.

Of the vast area of land contained in the limits of Florida, (37,931,520 acres,) in the year 1856, according to the report of Hon. R. M. YOUNG, Commissioner of the Land Office, 26,187,137 acres remained "the property of the Government, and subject to be disposed of." No doubt sales have since been made, but as the current of emigration has never set toward Florida, the amount must be small, and the fee of the soil of nearly the entire State still remains in the Government of the United States. A large portion of the State, (say 7,000,000 acres,) is swamp land, including the everglades of the Southern part of the peninsula, and may be deducted from the area immediately available for human habitation. But without this there would still be land enough in Florida, the property of the Government, to support a population as large as that of the States of New-York, Connecticut and New-Jersey combined; and with far less manual labor than is required in the latter States.

The productions of Florida are among the most valuable known to commerce. They are chiefly cotton, sugar and tobacco. But it is well established that no State in the South furnishes better lands for rice, or finer forests of live oak and of pine for lumber, and for tar and turpentine, which articles are now in such great demand here and abroad. For sustaining life, Florida is said to possess almost unequaled capacities, yielding Indian corn, sweet potatoes, and almost every sort of garden vegetables in profusion; the finer fruits of all varieties. Its "range" for hogs and cattle is never exhausted, and keeps the animals fat Winter and Summer with but little cost to the owner, and all its coast and streams are full of oysters and fishes. In addition to these physical advantages, Florida possesses a climate admirably adapted to African life and labor.

Why should not the freed Africans be colonized in Florida? Why buy, at the cost of millions of dollars (to go into the pockets of speculators) lands in Central America, (Chiriqui,) or elsewhere, when the Government owns more than enough in Florida, smiling in tropical beauty, and only asking for laborers to come and enjoy? Why charter ships at great cost to send population away from our shores, when by making Florida the free home of the black, he will transport himself thither without cost to the Government? Why expatriate our labor, and give it to Denmark, or Hayti, to create in foreign countries and contribute to foreign wealth, the rich products that might be grown by that same labor on our own soil? Why send away an honest, humble people who love America as their native land, and have committed no crime to demand their forcible exile, if we can give them a home on our own soil, under our own Republican Constitution and laws, and without at all displacing, jostling or interfering with our white population? Florida, with an area for five millions of people, has less than 100,000 whites—and yet it is the oldest settled region in America. Of all the lands in the world, what other so fit for the freed blacks as that State which the whites have shunned, which the Government owns, and the blacks need, and can cheaply and quickly reach?

The Medical Department of the Army.

We publish, to-day, two communications on subjects of the first importance to our armies in the field, and, through them, to every family in the land. War is not a matter of parades and battle-fields, as the picture-books of history and the popular feeling make it out to be. It is simply the organization of numbers of men, into a new and nomadic habit of life. An army is a city composed of male citizens only, living mostly out of doors, and exposed to the severest strain upon all their resources, physical, mental and moral. How to save these men from decimation by disease, before they come under the fire of the similar hostile city against which they are moving; how to care for them after the collision has taken place; how to restore those of whom sickness and the sword may spare in the best condition to their homes and their ordinary life,—these are great problems, in which not only they, but the whole community to which they belong, must feel the deepest interest.

What are we to say, then, when we find that the department of our military service, especially charged with the high and sacred duty of solving these problems, practically is still, after eighteen months of actual war, compelled to appeal to the authorities for the facilities most essential to the discharge of its functions? Can there be any language too strong for the demand which the country ought to make, that scenes such as one of our correspondents describes as following the battle of Antietam, shall hereafter become impossible? That hundreds of brave and loyal soldiers, falling in agony under the flag of the Union, should be left for forty-eight hours to breathe their life and hope away in useless suffering upon the field of their glory, and this for the want of adequate transportation under the orders of the Medical Staff, is a scandal too loud and terrible to pass unheeded.

The army needs a separate Quartermaster's Department, under the direction of the Surgeon-General—a department not necessarily extensive, but efficient—a force of wagons, ambulances and drivers fitted for the service, held well in hand, and ready to be launched in the direction of any great contest, with some reasonable expectation that it will reach the scene of action in time to supply the wounded and their surgeons with all that is necessary and indispensable to the safety of life and the alleviation of misery. That such a service should not already exist in our army is intolerable. The rebel Government, with its comparatively limited resources, has already taken the initiative in the matter, and we are lagging, not only behind Europe, but behind our domestic enemies, in this primary duty to our troops.

Another of our correspondents, familiar with the subject of which he speaks, puts in a plea for the employment in our hospitals of the slaves who seek refuge within our lines. We can see no possible objection to the adoption of this plan—many positive reasons in its favor. It would be a double mercy to our suffering heroes, and to the negroes, whom we ought not to rescue from bondage only to condemn them to uselessness and crime.

The "Sanitary Commission is busily at work in this matter of our medical organization, and deserves great credit for all that it has accomplished, and all that it has suggested of useful reform. But the matter deserves public attention and national action. We trust the Government will sleep on it no longer. Red tape is good, and, in its way, respectable; but red blood is better and more valuable. Let us spare all that we can, and make the most of this sacred treasure which the people so lavishly offer to the land they love, and the leaders they have chosen.

A QUESTION OF SURVIVORSHIP.—Our attention has been called to a provision which we must admit has caused us some alarm, in the draft of a civil code which has been prepared by the Commissioners of the Code and submitted for examination, and we deem it our duty to call the attention of the public to it. It is found in the 115th section, which provides that "a surviving parent (or, in case of an illegitimate, the mother) of a child likely to be born, or of an unmarried child who is a minor, or incapable of taking care of its person, may by deed or will appoint a guardian of the person." Thus it will be seen that the Commissioners intimate very strongly, that under this code, the "surviving parent" "of a child likely to be born," may in some cases be the father.

Legal reforms may be well enough, but so radical a change as this ought not to be made without at least a good deal of consideration. If it should be adopted, the decisions under it might perhaps throw some light upon the old question—"Suppose your aunt should be your uncle?"

Nothing from the Army.

Once more the telegraph forbears to give us news. In these latter days, indeed, the magnetic messenger too often merits the stale sneer that whatever he announces as news is apt not to be true, and that whatever he brings of truth is hardly news. Silence reigns on the Potomac—the silence, not of achievement, indeed, but of expectation—the lull in the storm.

How many of us, on taking up our morning paper will throw it down again, vexed and disappointed at this caption—"Nothing from the army?" And yet—reflect upon it—what have we to look for, when "something" comes from the army? The tidings of a battle would thrill the country with excitement, but not with excitement only. This news, for which we long, can only be bought with blood. When it comes to us, it must come borne upon the groans of the wounded, the sighs of the dying, the wail of the battle-field, to be echoed by the wail of a thousand, of ten thousand desolated hearths; deep calling unto deep—the deep of death to the deep of despair.

How strange and terrible is the spell which war casts upon the sensibilities of men! Communities grow familiar with its catastrophies, as individual soldiers do with its horrors. Eighteen months ago, the news of the battle of Bethel stirred and shocked the land more than the news of the battle of Antietam does to-day; we can read now of the slaughter of thousands more calmly than then we read of the slaughter of scores of our fellow-citizens.

"Nothing from the army." It is trying, this silence,—and yet let us console ourselves under it by the thought of the anxious, half-broken hearts, to which these four words bring a brief respite of relief and hope. Another day snatched from the danger which broods ceaselessly over the brave and the beloved; another day won from Erebus and black night, for life and love. Shall we call this "nothing?" Is it not "something from the army," after all?

And yet, the popular impatience is not wholly blind, or selfish, or inhuman. War is a process, not a result—its end and aim is peace—and peace can only come with "something from the army;" that something, dread, solemn, and glorious as awful, which men call victory!

Delay is respite only, not redemption. The lull in the storm is not the calm we seek. If, it solace for a moment ten thousand hearts it is but to prolong the strain upon their tenderness and their truth, their courage and their faith. "Nothing from the army," to-day, means "something from the army" to-morrow, next week, next month—something indefinitely terrible and trying, the chill and vague anticipation of misery yet to come.

It is natural, then, and right, that we should seek to hear "something from the army." Seek it not in the fretful spirit of curiosity; not in passion, with no mere longing for the tremendous emotions which spring from the clash and collision of mighty hosts. But, as patriots and as men, let us earnestly hope and pray that the end which war alone can bring may not be delayed either by misuse or disuse of the means of war; that really decisive events may early bring to all the land the blissful moment in which we shall have nothing more to hear from the army; the moment of peace sprung from victory, and secured by the establishment of Justice and LAW.

COL. HAMILTON, OF TEXAS, AND THE SOUTHERN UNIONISTS.—Of those sturdy and irrepressible patriots, who ennoble their race by devotion to their country, ANDREW JACKSON HAMILTON, of Texas, should stand in the foremost rank. Rather than enjoy the honors, rewards and immunity offered as a bribe by treason, he has given up home, and friends, and wealth; and after months of danger by the way, is here at last a penniless fugitive. In old Greece, they who came with such sacred antecedents, were known as "suppliants." Their cause was holy; and king or archon who should turn away from it unhelpful, were exposed to the wrath of the Gods and the vengeful pursuit of the Furies. The cause which brought Mr. HAMILTON hither, he exposed last night at Brooklyn, and more briefly in New-York. He spoke of the sufferings of Southern Unionists; of the condition especially of his own imperial State; of the wrongs, the cruelties, the unspeakable torture suffered by his friends and neighbors; and implored the people and the Government to move at once to the rescue of these political confessors. Of the peculiar and effective eloquence of this great Southwestern orator, it is impossible to give a sufficient idea. His title to be regarded as the leading stump-speaker of Texas, and the reason why, next to HOUSTON, he was the most popular man in the State, before treason had poisoned the minds of the people, it is very easy to understand after listening to a few of his magnificent periods.

Col. HAMILTON speaks again to-night, under the auspices of the National War Committee, at Cooper Institute. Those who fail to hear him will create for themselves an imperishable source of regret.

THE WAR COMMITTEE AND THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—An effort was made yesterday to prevent the National War Committee from continuing its occupancy of the rooms belonging to the Chamber of Commerce. The contest in the latter body was quite spirited on the part of the exclusionists; but the Chamber, indisposed to commit itself even by implication, to measures tending to discourage loyal efforts to sustain and perpetuate the Government, voted against the expulsion; and it now only remains for the Committee to seek accommodations elsewhere to make the transaction neat and complete in every particular. The Chamber of Commerce has vindicated its loyalty. Let the Committee vindicate its dignity.

For the Rio Grande.

Mr. C. H. BACON, recently United States Consul at Monterey, Mexico, is about to return to the Mexican side of the Rio Grande. He will bear with him only letters or packages to loyal refugees in that locality, from friends at the East who have been awaiting means of communication. The address of Mr. BACON, is "Mr. B. Consul, Box 3 Old-city." Mr. BACON will leave for Mexico on Monday next.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS ABROAD.

The Reception of Bad News—A Hero of the Country—What the Secessionists Say—The Movement to Mexico—What are the Ultimate Designs of France, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Sept. 19, 1862.

The telegraph for the last few days has brought us a most discouraging batch of news from America, terminating with the retreat of the National Army to the fortifications at Arlington Heights, and the entry of Gen. JACKSON into Maryland. The few Nationalists left at Paris carry their chagrin, written in capital letters, on their faces, while our Southern friends, who came all at once, at least to us, disappointed ones, to have sprung up into untold multitudes, and who somehow manage to meet one on every pavement and at every turning, are smiling and buoyant beyond any former example. And, since there are griefs too profound to admit of intrusion, I determined for one day, at least, to promenade mine in the country, where with the aid of a little solitude they might be forgotten, or at least protected from rude hosanks. But, alas! "Secesh" was everywhere present, as well in the railroad cars as in the streets, and I found myself boxed up, face to face, with an indignant Frenchman, who had been taken prisoner by Gen. BUTLER, at New-Orleans, and paroled off to France, and a boasting Texian, who had run a ship with a valuable cargo out of Matamoras, and into the French port of Havre, and who was going to take back to Matamoras a cargo of arms and material of war for the rebellion. I escaped at the first station, and, diving into a village on the banks of the river, was astounded to running against two lugubrious Union friends, who sat gazing vacantly into the water discussing POPE'S "lines of retreat," and the ups and downs of Bull Run. So we joined miseries, in order to keep each other's courage up.

The secession papers, however, are nothing like as savage on the Nationals as after the failure on the Chickahominy. They imagine, no doubt, that the cause of the Union is lost, and that they have no need any longer to occupy themselves with the subject. They claim, however, that as soon as the Nationals are entirely chased from the soil of the eleven Confederate States that a recognition of the Confederacy must immediately take place. At the same time, the article of the Richmond Dispatch, arguing that a recognition of the South would only damage their cause, since it would increase the energy of the North, has been universally copied and commented on as plausible. There is thus manifested the usual want of consistency, which proves either that the writers are superficial observers, or else that they are paid.

There is no danger of intervention, however, so long as the Government shows a disposition to resist the rebellion. No matter how much the London Times or the Paris Constitutionnel may threaten or falsify the sentiments of their respective Governments, there will be no intervention of any kind till the Government of the United States itself recognizes either directly or indirectly, the uselessness of the struggle. And this period, it is to be hoped, will never arrive.

There is a contingency, however, which may arise on a collateral question, of sufficient importance to induce France to deviate from this now fixed policy, and that is the affair of Mexico. As I told you in my last letter, the French are sending out an army, and railroad and telegraph appliances, which prove plainly that they are going to remain in Mexico, or in certain parts of it, and there establish a Government, lines of travel between the two oceans, and other sources of military and political strength, which will not only neutralize the power of the American race on the Western Continent, but offer a permanent barrier to their future extension to the southward. The number of men already sent is officially stated at 42,000, which is double the number required for the conquest of Mexico, and enough to form the nucleus of a permanent army of occupation. But I am assured that another 40,000 men are held in reserve, and that the transports and everything else required for a speedy voyage are in readiness, whenever they may be needed. And if the French Government has fully engaged itself in an enterprise of this importance, it is upon the assumption that the separation of the American States is final; so that if it is found contrary to expectation, that the North is likely to conquer the South, France, in order to be able to carry out her designs in Mexico, will be obliged to enter into a coalition with the South. Thus it will be seen how, aside from the merits of the question, as between the North and the South, a recognition, or worse, a coalition, may be brought about.

But here again arises a question which is already occupying, no doubt, the attention of Mr. SEWARD, for, since the Southern Confederacy also has its eyes fixed on Mexico, and the gradual extension of Slavery, it becomes a definite point for the rebels to know how far they can go with France in such a coalition. It is not improbable that, in the diplomatic conferences which have taken place thus far on these questions, there has been an immense amount of mutual dissimulation, to use a mild phrase, and that there will be a terrible explosion when the final reckoning is made.

A short article in the New-York Times of four weeks ago, and to which we doubt you attached no great importance, has had the honors of a general circulation over the European telegraph, and of "leaders" without number, in all the political newspapers from London to Constantinople. In this article you said that no mediation would be accepted by the United States except that which admitted a return of the Southern States to their duty in the Union, and this article was seized on as an indication that the North was coming to its senses, since a leading paper was willing to discuss the terms of a mediation!

The owner of the French ship which was seized for having left New-Orleans without a permit, has made quite a row here about the matter at the American Legation.

The anecdote which I sent you last week in regard to the famous telegraphic dispatch which announced that the French Ambassador at Rome had assured the Pope of the intention of France to maintain indefinitely the temporal power, has been since published in a French paper, and contradicted by authority of the Foreign Office. From the high position of the persons concerned it was impossible that such a statement should pass unnoticed and a denial was to be expected. The story is to be therefore considered as officially contradicted.

The rush of Americans homeward continues, especially of the ladies, and but few of either sex are arriving. MALAKOFF.

Antietam Reproduced.

Mr. M. B. BRADY, whose collection of National portraits is simply unapproached, and whose battle scenes, procured under circumstances trying to the courage and manhood of his artists, furnish to the time-present, and will exhibit to wondering time yet to come, the most absolute portraiture of the incidents, places and persons of our civil war, has just received from his artists, who were at the battle of Antietam, a series of most interesting views. They comprise pictures of the field of battle, the positions of the several corps, and many thrilling incidents. The public can see and purchase copies at BRADY'S Gallery.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.

Ambulance Transportation for the Medical Department, an Indispensable Necessity.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Public attention has recently been drawn to a great deficiency in the present means of transportation for the sick and wounded of our army. This deficiency is characterized not only by the entire absence of anything like a Regular Ambulance Corps, but also by the want of vehicles for carrying upon the battle-field, or into the neighboring hospitals, the masses of suffering men requiring nursing. It will scarcely be believed, when we assert that after fifteen or sixteen months of hard fighting, involving nearly 200,000 sick and wounded men, the Government is still without an Ambulance Corps.

It is true, that the Quartermaster's Department has purchased hundreds of two and four-wheeled vehicles for transporting sick and wounded men, which it has dispatched to and wherever the Medical Bureau says they are needed; but no attempt can be made to insure their usefulness after they reach their destination, unless the Medical Bureau is allowed to man and officer them.

There is always dangerous delay in starting our improvised ambulance trains, made up, as they often are in part, of common hacks and omnibuses; and when they are started they are driven by inexperienced or worthless men and boys, who have no interest, either professional or humane, in anything, except how they shall get enough food, sleep and whisky, and get back to their congenial haunts and idleness.

Of what value can such people be to the medical officers in the field? Have they not enough to do in the practice of their art, without being compelled to rally drivers who are incompetent, from drunkenness or inhumanity, or sloth, and subject to no control, or, not being enlisted, or in any true sense under military discipline? I have seen ambulances filled with wounded frequently in the care of boys or drunken men, the latter having stolen the liquor—the medical officers, meanwhile, powerless to correct the evil. We have known ambulance drivers to take the food prepared for the wounded, and, in some instances, with drunken indifference, to maltreat their helpless bodies or broken limbs.

We cannot conceive of anything worse than the present ambulance service. When the 4,000 or 5,000 wounded had to be removed, after the second Bull Run, under flag of truce, men and boydsvere picked up on the streets of Washington to drive the ambulances, and inflict their inefficiency or inhumanity upon the brave and almost lifeless persons of the poor fellows who had been exposed upon the battle-field, naked and with undressed wounds for five or six days. We there saw the ambulance drivers stealing the stimulus intended for the wounded, and exhibiting an absence of sympathy for them which was almost shocking; the contrast presented by the heroic endurance of our uncomplaining wounded soldiers, was most sublime. Now, is there no remedy for such evils? We say, yes. Surgeon-Gen. HAMMOND has indicated the remedy, and presented in Govern. of this service, and I have found an almost universal sympathy from the surgeons whom I have met since my return from Richmond, of the difficulty of finding men fit for the discharge of this delicate and indispensable duty. Why should not such men be looked for among the "contrabands" whom the advance of our army steadily liberates, and who crowd upon the Government with the vagrant, most childlike and embarrassing notions of the change which freedom has wrought in their condition and their prospects?

During my residence at Richmond, I frequently visited the hospitals in that city, and I was on friendly terms with two or three extremely intelligent surgeons in the rebel army. The extent of the suffering inflicted upon the sick and wounded in that army by the insufficient numbers and the undisciplined character of their nurses can scarcely be imagined, and I should be sorry to shock your readers by attempting to describe it. The evil, indeed, was so flagrant and severe as to compel, in a measure, its own cure; and before I left Virginia serious efforts were making to organize, in some of the Richmond hospitals, a force of nurses, by the employment of negroes. Wherever this experiment had been tried with judgment and patience, it had proved entirely successful. The negroes are naturally a sympathetic and kind-hearted people, easily subjected to proper discipline, and decidedly more humane and gentle than the lower classes of our own population. If a systematic effort were made to select and enroll in a specific body, from among the negroes whom this exodus of every day brings within our lines, those who are fitted by their years and their intelligence for hospital duty, I am satisfied that an immense result of relief to our hospital service would be secured. The same qualities which make the negroes successful as teachers and waiters in our great hotels, would make them successful, with proper instruction, in a very short time, as nurses in our great hospitals; and while we should thus alleviate the sufferings of our soldiers, we should be doing the slaves, whom we set free, the incomputable service of educating them to take care of themselves in caring for other people.

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM HENRY HURLBERT.

WATER-PROOF ROOFS.

WATER-PROOF ROOFS
ARE MADE BY THE
WARREN ROOFING COMPANY,
No. 118 John-st., New-York.

Many years' use of WARREN'S IMPROVED FIRE AND WATER-PROOF ROOFING, (composed of felt, cement and gravel,) in New-York City and throughout the United States, prove its superiority over all moist or other materials now in use for covering flat-roof buildings.

WARREN'S ELASTIC CEMENT, FOR COATING LEAKY TIN ROOFS,
is superior to anything else now in use for that purpose, more elastic and durable, and impervious to water.

Southern Flour is lively demand at higher prices, about 2,500 bbls., at $4 35@$6 50 for good to fancy extra Baltimore, &c., at $4 60@$7 75 for fancy and family brands, and $7 75@$8 50 for very superior extra brands, ⅌ bbl. Canadian Flour is improving. Sales 1,400 bbls. extra, at $5 70@$7 50 ⅌ bbl. Rye Flour continues in slack demand, $3 10 for fine and superfine, ⅌ bbl. Corn Meal is more sought after at $3 40@$4 25 for Jersey, $3 75 for Marsh's Caleric, and $3 40@$3 75 for Brandywine ⅌ bbl.

GRAIN—Wheat has been more abundant, and has declined 1c. ⅌ bushel. The demand has been good, mainly for Winter Red Western, for export, at the advanced figures. The reported sales since our last comprise 200,000 bushels, part to arrive, including White Western, at $1 35@$1 42; Amber Western at $1 32@$1 34; Red Western (Winter) at $1 25@$1 31; very poor do. (Illinois), at $1 22@$1 25; Amber Iowa and Wisconsin, at $1 31@$1 33; Milwaukee Club, on $1 24@$1 28; Chicago Spring, at $1 09@$1 18 ⅌ bushel. Sales, 2,100 bushels Canada, at $1 07@$1 09 ⅌ bushel.

The following comparative table shows the quantity of Breadstuffs left at the seaboard ports of the commencement of navigation to and including the 30th of September in the years indicated:

	1862. Canals opened April 28.	1861. May 1.	1860. May 1.
Flour, bbls.	568,449	784,747	605,005
Wheat, bush.	3,044,268	16,478,748	21,150,164
Corn	11,657,969	19,763,816	15,038,379
Barley	398,559	272,157	621,440
Oats	4,237,560	3,503,289	3,066,416
Rye	208,472	964,466	805,339

HAY—North River Bale has been freely purchased, at 65c.@75c. ⅌ 100 lb.

HOPS—Have been in fair request, at 14c.@19c. for new, and 12c.@16c. for old, ⅌ lb.

LUMBER—The arrivals of Eastern Spruce and Pine, recently, have been light, and the current transactions have been also restricted, but prices have been firm. In Albany, according to the Evening Journal, receipts have been far less than the previous week, and sales have been light, with but a small amount of buyers. The shipments have been small, owing to the absence of vessels, which are much wanted for Eastern ports at high rates of freight. Prices remain firm and with a tendency toward an advance, and the stock on hand being light for the season of the year, with a probability of small receipts for the balance of the season, with a fair demand, the advance will be realized. The receipts by the Erie and Champlain Canals, during the fourth week in September, in the years named, were as follows:

	Boards and Plank. Feet.	Shingles. No.	Timber. Cu. ft.	Staves. No.
1862	6,687,000	770	9,200	3,182,300
1861	7,040,000	1,611	1,069	8,552,469
1860	4,169,765	467	800	5,437,000

The receipts by the Champlain and Erie Canals from the opening of navigation to Oct. 1, in the years named, were as follows:

	Boards and Plank. Feet.	Shingles. No.	Timber. Cu. ft.	Staves. No.
1862	96,000,000	27,000	29,718	100,071,977
1861	118,044,762	27,157	7,204	101,586,659
1860	127,491,179	27,271	106,630	148,276,136

METALS—Have been quiet, to-day, but very firm.

MOLASSES—Has been less sought after, at previous rates.

NAVAL STORES—Rosins have been in moderate request, including Common, at $1 30@$1 35 ⅌ 280 lbs. Spirits Turpentine has been inactive, at 43 25@44 37½ ⅌ gallon. Tar has been quiet steady, at $1 62½@$1 75 ⅌ bbl.

OILS—Have been moderately dealt in at unchanged quotations.

PROVISIONS—Pork has been more sought after, and has advanced to $11 62½@$11 75 for Mess, and $10 25 for Prime, ⅌ bbl. The reported sales, since our last, have been 4,100 bbls. Cut Meats continue inactive at 6¾c.@7¾c. for Hams, and 4¾c.@4¾c. for Shoulders, ⅌ lb. Bacon is unchanged. Lard is less active, sales 1,200 tierces and bbls., for immediate and future delivery, at 10¼c.@10¾c., ⅌ lb. Beef is quiet at old figures; sales 165 bbls., at $14@$14 62½ for Extra Mess, and $12 50@$13 50 for Plain Mess, ⅌ bbl.; Prime Mess, $20@$21 50 ⅌ tc. Beef Hams, $14 75@$16 ⅌ bbl. Butter continues in good demand at 12c.@16½c. for poor to very choice Western, and 16c.@21c. for common to choice State, ⅌ lb. Cheese is active and firmer, at 6c.@6½c., ⅌ lb.

RICE—Sales 270 bags East India at 3c.@3¼c.; 2 ⅌ 100 lbs. Stock, Oct. 1, 11,710 bags cleaned and 22,630 bags, uncleaned East India, against 2,931 tcs. and 830 bags East India, Oct. 1, 1861.

SUGARS—Have been rather lightly dealt in to-day, at full prices. Sales 350 hhds., including New-Orleans, at 9¾c.@10c., and Cuba at 9c.@9¾c.; also, 75 boxes Havana at 8¾c.@9¾c., ⅌ lb.

TALLOW—Sales, to-day, 60,000 lbs., at 10¾c.@10c. ⅌ lb. The week's business Messrs. Kenny & Sons review thus: "The market during the past week has greatly advanced, and, owing to the sudden advance in gold and the consequent rise in Sterling Exchange, has enabled exporters to fill many orders which were before much below the market. The demand for prime shipping lots continues large, and straight lots in hogsheads are scarce, at 10¾c.@11c. The latter figure may be considered the price for carefully prime. Lots in barrels and tierces are scarce. To-day the market closes firm. Price this day, 1858, 10½c.; 1859, 10¾c.; 1860, 10c.; 1861, 8¾c. ⅌ lb."

WHEAT—Sales, 42,000 bbls., in lots, at 30¼c.@34c. (see letter rate, an extreme one, for scholes brand) ⅌ gallon.

FREIGHTS—Rates are advancing, although business has not been active to-day. We quote: For Liverpool—Flour, 4s. 3d.@5s. 6d. ⅌ bbl.; Wheat, in bulk and bags, 10d.@11½d.; Corn, 11½d.@12d. ⅌ bushel; Pork, 7s. 6d.; Pork, 5s. 6d. ⅌ bbl.; Cotton, ¼ ⅌ lb.; Bacon and Lard, 27s. 6d.; Butter and Cheese, 30s.@40s. 6d.; Tallow and Oil Cake, 35s.; ⅌ ton. For Glasgow—Flour, 5s. 6d. ⅌ bbl.; Grain, 12½d.@12½d. ⅌ bushel; Pork, 5s. ⅌ bbl.; Beef 7s. ⅌ tce.; Bacon and Lard 40s.@42s. 6d.; Butter and Cheese, 45s.@50s.; Oil, 42s. 6d. ⅌ ton. PROPOSALS.

HEADQUARTERS SUPERINTENDENT General Recruiting Service New-York State Volunteers, Mustering and Disbursing Officer, No. 562 Broadway, Albany, N.Y., Sept. 30, 1862.
PROPOSALS CONCERNING SUBSISTENCE FOR DRAFTED MILITIA.
The following places are hereby designated as rendezvous for the drafted militia of the State of New-York, viz.:
PLATTSBURGH—For the Counties of Clinton, St. Lawrence, Franklin, Essex, Franklin, Hamilton, Jefferson, Lewis and Herkimer.
ALBANY—For the Counties of Albany, Delaware, Otsego, Schoharie, Green, Schenectady, Montgomery, Columbia, Rensselaer, Washington, Fulton, Saratoga, Oneida and Dutchess.
ELMIRA—For the Counties of Broome, Tioga, Oswego, Chenango, Cortland, Tompkins, Chemung, Wayne, Greene, Seneca, Cayuga, Ontario, Steuben, Schuyler, Madison and Yates.
EAST NEW-YORK, OR LONG ISLAND—For New-York City and County, and the Counties of Kings, Queens, Suffolk, Richmond, Westchester, Rockland, Putnam, Orange, Ulster and Sullivan.
BUFFALO—For the Counties of Allegheny, Wyoming, Livingston, Monroe, Orleans, Genesee, Niagara, Erie, Cattaraugus and Chateaugay.
Proposals will be received at this office, until Friday, 10 o'clock P. M. of the 10th day of October, for supplying the Drafted Militia of the State of New-York, with subsistence at the Camps or Stations before enumerated.
The subsistence is to consist of smoked rations—the raw rations—which consists of the following, to wit:
Three-fourths of a pound of pork or bacon, or one and one-fourth pounds of fresh or corned beef; twenty-two ounces of bread or flour, or, one pound of hard bread, or, one and one-fourth pounds of corn-meal, and at the rate to every one hundred rations, of eight quarts of beans or peas, and ten pounds of rice or hominy; ten pounds of green coffee, or, eight pounds of roasted or ground coffee, or, one and one-half pounds of tea; fifteen pounds of sugar; four quarts of vinegar; one pound of sperm candles, or, one and one-fourth pounds of adamantine candles, or one and one-half pounds of tallow candles; four pounds of soap and two quarts of salt.
In addition to the foregoing, twice per week, one gallon of molasses per one hundred rations and twice per week an issue of potatoes, at the rate of one pound per man.
When beans, peas, rice, hominy, or potatoes cannot be issued in the proportion given above, an equivalent in value shall be issued in some other proper food.
Dessicated potatoes or dessicated mixed vegetables, at the rate per one hundred rations of one hundred and fifty ounces of the former, or one hundred ounces of the latter, may be substituted for beans, peas, rice, hominy, or fresh potatoes, when these articles cannot be issued; or they may be issued at the foregoing rate twice per week, in lieu of beans or peas, or in lieu of rice or hominy, upon the requisition of the officer commanding the depot; fresh beef may be issued when the officer commanding the depot may require it, when practicable, in place of salt meat.
Each bid will be indorsed, "Subsistence for Drafted Militia."
Good and ample security will be required. It will not be obligatory to receive the lowest bid.
J. T. SPRAGUE, Major 1st Infantry U. S. A.
Superintendent and Mustering and Disbursing Officer.

STEAM TO LONDONDERRY, GLASGOW AND LIVERPOOL.—The Mont

COL. JACK HAMILTON IN BROOKLYN.

A Brilliant Audience at the Academy of Music—Col. Hamilton's Speech—He Prefers the Union to Slavery.

The Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded with a brilliant audience last evening, on the occasion of the reception and address of Col. JACK HAMILTON, of Texas. The stage was occupied by a number of prominent gentlemen of Brooklyn, among whom were A. A. Low, J. S. T. STRANAHAN, Messrs F. Cowles, Mr. BERGH, and Ex-Mayor HALL. There were also a large number of the delegates from the National Union Convention, now in session in this City.

Mr. A. A. LOW, on behalf of the Committee, made the opening address, nominally introducing the honored representative from the Lone Star State. [Applause.] He thought that perhaps it would be better to preserve the order, and tell their guest who they were. He spoke of Brooklyn's progress and loyalty, saying that the only sound which would be welcome to all ears would be the music of the Union. [Applause.] In conclusion he presented Col. HAMILTON to the audience.

SPEECH OF MAJ. ANDREW JACKSON HAMILTON.

When the prolonged and hearty applause which again and again greeted him had subsided, Col. HAMILTON commenced by saying that at the threshold of his remarks upon the gravest subject that ever addressed itself to any people, he would say to them, "I thank you for this reception"—(applause)—not because of personal gratification at their appreciation of his own loyalty, but because the appreciation would be acknowledged by thousands as loyal as he to his adopted country—as a just and proper compliment to them also. [Applause.] If they expected an editorial and poetic address, they would go away disappointed. Should he attempt any such thing, he would not but excuse himself of trifling with a solemn and serious subject. He would address himself to the questions, Why is our country in this condition? What are the causes, and what are the remedies to be applied? This he would do without fear of offence, save the offence against truth. [Applause.] The Union is dismembered. Many think they can give the cause. Various men attribute the cause to the action of different political parties. Some say the Abolitionists of the North—others the Democratic Party—and others say our forefathers might have so discharged their duty as to have precluded such a result as this. He would not, at his time of life, in the time of the necessity of looking out for the liberty of the country and its interests in all the future, stop long to consider what was the cause. He listened to all, as long Hickory dictated, and his answer was, "I grant your premises, but what are you going to do about it?" All agreed that a great Government was in danger, and that if it was destroyed our hopes for the future were sad indeed. The only question was as to restoring the Government. He could not better give the view of the cause than by alluding to some remarks of Mr. SPRATT, of South Carolina, addressed to the South, to the end of establishing the necessity of changing the system of government. Mr. SPRATT has probably said that no man was deserving of the name of statesman in the South who could pretend that the cause of rebellion and secession was the aggressment of the non-slaveholding North upon the South, for no such aggressions had been committed. Mr. SPRATT said it was because of the difference in the organization of society North and South; that in the North every man, being a freeman, had power in the Government, and it required but little argument to show that there were and would be more laboring men than men who directed labor; that, on the other hand, when Government was in the hands of those who directed labor, it would be to the right hands. Mr. SPRATT found fault with the leaders of the secession movement because they did not renew the Slave-trade. From the premises laid down, it appeared that Slavery and Democracy were incompatibles. Mr. SPRATT complimented Mr. SEWARD, and said there never was a greater truth uttered than that of the "irrepressible conflict." [Applause.] Mr. SPRATT's conclusion was that they must have a slave aristocracy. [Hisses.] If these sentiments did not represent the sentiments of the South, they would be of less significance. But it must be remembered that that letter of Mr. SPRATT's was reproduced with commendation, and unrebuked; that it was commended and echoed in the streets and parlors, and at the festive board. They said that Republicanism is a fallacious idea; we must have a strong Government. If they knew this as he knew it, they would know that this rebellion did not originate with a desire to get rid of the hated Yankees. They wanted to be the conductors of a supreme and never changing Government, not to be interfered with by the votes of free men. Therefore, the idea of conciliating the South by forbearance and magnanimity was wholly deceptive. There is but one remedy, and that is in the physical power of the loyal people, [Great applause,] properly directed by sufficient strength, to lead to correct conclusions as to the consequences of failure. When he spoke of the suffering people of the South he excepted the office-holders. All had suffered in business, commerce, the destruction of wise and salutary laws, and the upheaval of the elements of society. He spoke of the body of the people—not all aware of what was in store for them. None knew how deeply he felt that friends and foes would criticise what he said. His sacrifices in parting from his friends and home without a knowledge of when he should return, were in part compensated by his knowledge that he was right and that whatever might be the verdict of his friends upon his conviction, they were just as certain to arrive at his conclusion as that he stood there that night. [Applause.] Mr. SPRATT concluded that the free society of the North would destroy Slavery by grappling with it with moral force, and it was intended to make the slave owner, and the slave owner alone, the entire power of Government. Now while, but a short time ago he would have regarded a man who would free the slave, at least, an impracticable friend of the Government. While he believed that our fathers knew as well as any how to avoid the very troubles raised between the advocates and opponents of Slavery, he was not prepared to see Slavery used to cleave itself, and, in the same proportion depress his brethren. The aspect of the generation was changing. The friends of Slavery had before only endeavored to protect it under the laws. He had cautioned the South, in the inception of the rebellion, that it would not brave the moral sympathy in Slavery exhibited through the protection of the United States. [Applause.] But that when they sinked the Constitution of that Government and sought to establish a Government on the basis of Slavery, they would challenge the public opinion of the world and cut loose from thousands of loyal friends—men who respected the Government and laws of the United States, and felt that a remedy would be presented for any intolerable evil. He told them that they had determined to sacrifice all considerations for Slavery, and Slavery alone, and that in two or three years they would find that it would be impossible to make the new Government liberal. The great body of the people of the North had an earnest and sincere desire to preserve the Government. [Applause.] Why, then, did they allow the secession movement to prosper? Because South of the Mason and Dixon line every artifice of deception was used. Every candidate for office endeavored to out Herod Herod in his denunciation of every attempt to injure Slavery; Slavery regarded every man as a traitor who did not regard it as one of the brightest evidences of the perfection of that wisdom that originated all good. [Laughter.] The successor of a man elected on such principles had to go further than his predecessor, or he was no better than the old man. Those whose mission was to preach peace on earth, had acted the Pro-Slavery propagandists. For himself he differed from those who said that it originated in hell, as he had from the others. [Laughter and applause.] He had always supposed that the wisdom of God permitted Slavery for some inscrutable purpose, and that when the end was accomplished, it would be done by Divine hand. Nevertheless, the South was told that the only way to bring the North to terms was to go out of the Union temporarily, so that the North would beg them to come back, and finally be the means of procuring perpetual peace. Others would caution their friends not to go the polls, not to recognize the madmen who were seeking to overthrow the country, so that in some States not one-fifth of the popular vote was cast. In Louisiana a majority of the votes cast were in opposition to secession in spite of handbills posted at the polls advising the opening of every ear so as to see who was in favor of the rotten, sinking old concern of the Lucifers. It might be said that the Union men of the South ought to have gone forth and exercised their rights, and have combated these lawless proceedings. Very true, but most of us prefer reading of and admiring martyrs, than of becoming martyrs. There were no little terrors on the prospect of being dragged with a rough rope to the lonely prairie—

"To be left a thing

That thing had happened, and was continuing to happen, and would happen, until the last free spirit of the North was killed, or the power of this Government should relieve them. [Applause.] That course of proceedure commenced before his personal knowledge, and before the election of LINCOLN. He was not a member of a Vigilance Committee, or the K. G. C's, but of least 200 loyal men of Texas had lost their lives in this way; because suspected of loving their children more than they loved their neighbors' property. [Applause.] If the rebellion resulted from a love of Slavery and a distrust of Slaveholders, and the rebels were justified in their effort to overthrow the Government in order to uproot Slavery, they had proved their allegiance to that institution. [Applause.] He had to go through no gradations in this Province. Nor need the men of his State be surprised at his declaration that if they forced him to the issue of the question, that if they forced him to the issue of the question, he should be with the South, as intensely in favor of Slavery, he always was even since

[Loud cheers.] If they compelled him to elect between his children and their negroes, it was easy to tell where he was to be found. [Approbation.] That issue was upon every man in the whole country, and must be met fairly by all. He spoke deliberately in the matter in condemnation of the leaders of this rebellion, who had been led to do as they did, only for their own interests. These leaders understood now something that they did not know eighteen months ago. It was a simple thing for a citizen of the South to decide whether he was better off in the great Southern Confederacy than in the Union. With his wife barefoot, his children naked, his home in mourning for those slain in battle to preserve his neighbors' negroes, himself a conscript. Was there any argument needed for him to decide. Did he need to ask what had the North done to injure him? They never stole a nigger from Texas, though some of their own neighbors had stolen their neighbors' niggers, sold them in Louisiana, and put the money in their pockets. He thanked God that if an opportunity ever offered to grasp a musket in defence of that Government, he would risk his life for it. [Loud applause.] He would not pretend that this was the outspoken opinion of the people of Texas. There was a Provost-Marshal and a Vigilance Committee and K. G. C's worming into every family, and spies upon every man in the land. One whisper of the deep emotions of the heart is enough—the alleged traitor is a prisoner, perhaps working on the roads, with a ball and chain as preliminary to some castigation. [Laughter.] For himself, he had been alleged to retire to the mountains, and about a hundred of his friends sought him out, and brought their old muskets and a round or two of ammunition. If they could hear the old men—loyal men—speak with tears of the last fading hopes of relief from the old Government, they could realize that the faces in public did not give the true reflex of the thoughts of the people's thoughts. The loyal men of the North were out in the cold. They had to feed upon the husks, and would gladly return to their father's house. [Applause.] He was obliged to revert partially to his own efforts to escape, though he did it reluctantly. [Cries of "Go on," "Go on."] He who attempts to escape from the persecutions of disloyal men has to traverse two hundred miles of desert prairie, which can only be traversed in safety by those who know the roads. The rebels have a force at all the wandering places, towns and fords. The traveler must be armed with a pass, and, even in Mexico, he interrupted by assassins. But a day or two before he passed between the villages on the other side of the Rio Grande, four men had been murdered for loyalty to the Union. He was himself deemed worth one bullet. And afterwards four or five efforts were made to dispose of him without success. The last thing he saw as the shore of Texas receded from his view, was a little band of armed men who had just failed to succeed in capturing him. We heard much talk now about the Constitution as it is, and the Union as it was. [Partial applause.] For himself, he said, The Constitution as it is—yes; the Union as it was? No! [Thunders of applause.] Now, fellow citizens, the Union as it was. [Applause.]

VOICE—How about Sumpter? [Cries of shame and hisses.]

Col. HAMILTON invoked the aid of loyal citizens in support of the Government; but said if they were to invest him with the power of reinstating the Union as it was in Texas in 1861, he would not thank them for the boon. [Applause.] If he was to be suspected because his conscience could not be measured by his neighbor's; if he was to be regarded as loathsome because he could not believe that Slavery was the acme of human beneficence; if he was to be stigmatized as a traitor because he advocated the principles of WASHINGTON, he wanted no such Union. [Applause.] When that Union was restored, as he trusted it would, he hoped to be allowed to realize that he enjoyed the right of speech, as well as the liberty of conscience, he would bless the Union that gave that right. [Approbation.] He could not consent that his children should go about trying to convince everybody in their vicinity that they were sound upon the subject of Slavery. [Applause.] He did not speak with hatred of the institution as Slavery, as he once knew it—not because his conscience hurt him because he had been a slaveholder. [Applause.] They were to have Slavery on the one hand, or freedom for the whites on the other. He believed in the freedom of the non-slaveholder. He spoke for a class destined to be in the majority and whose rights were assailed. If the spirit of a dire conflict resulting from a conflict of these two classes should present itself to him, he would say to it—

"Shake not thy gory locks at me,
Thou canst not say I did it."

He would answer, that he had warned them that they were digging an impassable gulf between themselves and the non-slaveholders; that they never could, in their new Government, give the non-slaveholders their rights; that when the non-slaveholders found that out, they would shake the pillars of the Confederacy; that if they could, the leaders intended to get the power in their hands, and then defy the non-slaveholder to obtain his rights. Mr. SPRATT and his coadjutors were developing their pet idea of the failure of republican institutions, and of the necessity of a new and strong Government. The slaveholders intend that Slavery shall be perpetuated, if Democracy perishes. It becomes the duty of every man to accept the issue tendered by the South. [Great applause.] If not willingly, he must do it per force. We are on the side of the Government. New-York has proven her power, in loyalty as well as in the extent and enterprise of her commercial influence. He was conversing with a man the other day, who said the war had lasted too long already, for, said he, "My trade is nothing like what it used to be." [Laughter.] We are all shallow reasoners when we are not deeply interested. That man had not been called to take a more serious view of the subject, or he would doubtless take the same view as he was about to present. While he would urge them to fight to free their bonded country—men of the South, he would ask them also to remember that our liberties are inseparably bound up with theirs. [Applause.] Was there a man who believed that if it was practicable to dismember the Government by the secession of the Confederacy, the dissolution would stop there? Granted that we would have 20,000,000 of freemen left at the North, with wealth, intelligence and power. But one thing we would not have, the prestige, the power, the very name of the United States. [Applause.] If the Government could not prevent one secession, it could not prevent another. If we could not crush rebellion once, could we crush it again? Suppose plausible arguments are presented for the great State of New-York to secede from the rest of the United States, or that inducements are presented why New-York City should be a free city, there are men in New-York who would listen to it. [Murmurs.] After the confidence of the people in the stability of the Government is broken, there is no circumscribing the spirit of secession. If Republicanism fails in the South, it will fail on the continent. We must crush the idea at the South if we would save ourselves. [Applause.] We must do it in defiance of foreign interference. [Applause.] We must not permit poor Mexico to become the victim of LOUIS NAPOLEON. The movement of that sinful, dark, mysterious, inscrutable man, is full of danger to the United States. Five years ago he would not have dared to brave our settled policy of the Monroe doctrine. [Applause.] Just as long as the people had a love and veneration for their Government, the command of the public sentiment of the United States was obeyed. But as soon as secession showed its head, England, France and Spain united to encroach upon our continent. Now France was alone, and LOUIS NAPOLEON was sending 60,000 or 100,000 men to Mexico. It was not alone for coercing the payment of money due to France, but it was to change the policy of Government there, with the view of breaking down the system of Republican Government here. [Applause.] He would appeal to their love of dollars and cents. He knew that they would not limit the liberty of their children by the love of money. He knew that the question was given concern to some of the best minds in the United States. He was glad to find here, as well as in Mexico, an appreciation of the subjects. He assured them, that from the best citizens of Mexico, prayers are earnestly going up for the salvation of the United States everywhere where our jurisdiction ever did exist. [Applause.] No man in the South who desired the success of the rebellion could be conciliated. No man of that stamp was likely to hear a proposition for compromise except on its own terms. Perhaps the guilty men, as separate from the deluded, would expect to be restored where they were, and that the guilty would be punished, and the deluded forgiven. JEFF. DAVIS could not expect to be President of the United States. [Laughter.] therefore his influence and that of all the guilty ones would be against any scheme of peace or conciliation. As to the rumored proposition of peace, he knew that the President had no such power, and surely Mr. LINCOLN had too much sense to dream of the exercise of any such power. [Applause.] Let us drop all idle talk of any such patchwork. The Government of the United States must be restored over all its territory. [Applause.] It must have no more under the Constitution, but it must exercise its power better. [Applause.] It will be long, should we crush rebellion, before a YANCEY, WIGFALL, REBETT or TOOMBS will be found preaching treason against their own Government. [Applause.] It was because the Government had confidence in the loyalty of the people that it permitted it so long. [Applause.] The Government had learned a lesson, and, if we got over this, would not make a similar mistake in future.

Col. HAMILTON strongly censured Mr. BUCHANAN for his timid, vacillating and almost treacherous course during the infancy of the rebellion, saying that secession would have been prevented, if there had been at the helm of state a worthy successor of WASHINGTON, JEFFERSON, MADISON, or of JACKSON. [Applause.] Instead of staying treason at the onset, Mr. BUCHANAN sat with his hands up, saying "Don't press me on. Just let my few remaining days pass in peace. I am content." [Hisses.] Mr. HAMILTON dwelt upon the monstrous treason of FLOYD and his coadjutors in the Cabinet, paid a deserved tribute to Jo. HOLT, and said that when it was rumored that the resignation of FLOYD was not to be accepted, there was a plan on foot in Washington to proceed to the White House and raze it to its foundation stone. [Applause.]

Col. HAMILTON, in earnest and persuasive eloquence, besought the sympathy and support of the people for the President in this trying hour, who occupies a position whose responsibility is not surpassed to-day beneath the sun. [Applause.] For himself, he asked not about the President's capacity, or the propriety of his policy. He but knew that he was the President—the legitimate President of the country. [Applause.] He believed, though thousands of his friends in the South would condemn him for the sentiment, that Mr. LINCOLN was an honest President. He believed it to be his duty to sustain the President to the full extent of his power, and that duty would be fully and faithfully performed. [Applause.] He connected confidence in the head of the army, and an abandonment of all discontent that might pervert our attention from the one leading object of crushing the rebels. [Applause.] In conclusion, he said: Let me ask that if, in the language of WASHINGTON, freedom is to go down upon this continent, let it fall, at least, amid the proudest monuments of its glory, on the very scene of its origin. [Applause, during which Col. HAMILTON retired.]

COL. HAMILTON'S ENGAGEMENTS IN NEW-YORK.

In consequence of a misapprehension respecting the engagements of Col. HAMILTON, of Texas, and of an announcement in several of the papers that the meeting, to hear from the loyal Unionists of Mississippi and Alabama, would be held on Friday evening, the meeting which was to have been held last evening was adjourned to Saturday evening next, Oct. 4, at 7½ o'clock, when Col. HAMILTON, with the other speakers announced in the published notices, will be present.

POPE'S CAMPAIGN IN VIRGINIA.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF GEN. SIGEL.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CORPS,
ARMY OF VIRGINIA, September, 1862.

After the battle of Cedar Mountain, the retreat of the First Corps from the Rapidan behind the Rappahannock, and the engagements of that corps near the Rappahannock Station, Freeman's Ford and Sulphur Springs, we advanced to Waterloo Bridge on the same day we had taken possession of Sulphur Springs. The brigade of Gen. MILROY occupied a position on the north side of the bridge, extending his line of sharpshooters along the shore of the river. The main body of the corps was encamped between the bridge and Sulphur Springs, and behind it the corps of Maj.-Gen. BANKS and Gen. RENO's Division. The enemy had advanced from Rappahannock Station, along the south side of the river in a line parallel with the route taken by our troops, and was trying to cross at the above-named ford (Freeman's) and the bridges at Sulphur Springs and Waterloo. In the night of the 24th August, his camp fires extended from Waterloo Bridge to Jefferson Village, in a distance of four or five miles, his main force of about 30,000 men occupying the latter point.

Early in the morning of the 26th, a sharp skirmish commenced at the Waterloo Bridge, which was reported to me by Gen. PORTER to have been destroyed by Gen. BURNSIDE, but which we found on our arrival to be in good order, and strongly defended by the enemy. While we were taking position on the north side, the enemy began to break up his camp at Jefferson, and to mass his troops on the south side of the bridge. By noon twenty-eight regiments of infantry, six batteries, and several regiments of cavalry of the enemy had arrived, and taken their position. I had the night before given notice of the enemy's strength and movements to Maj.-Gen. PORTER, and now again informed him of the position of affairs, as the disposition he had made of our forces was evidently based on the supposition that the enemy would force the passage of the river between Beaulston and Waterloo Bridge.

In the meantime, I had been directed to march to Fayetteville and form part of the centre of the army, to be arranged in a line extending from Waterloo Bridge to Beaulston Station. In accordance with this order, Gen. MILROY should have been relieved in the morning by a brigade of Gen. McDOWALL; another brigade of the third corps (McDOWALL's) had to march to Sulphur Springs. In the forenoon of the same day, Gen. ROBERTS, of Maj.-Gen. PORTER's Staff, delivered to me a verbal order to hold my position at Waterloo Bridge under all circumstances, and to meet the enemy if he should try to force the passage of the river, and that Gen. McDOWALL would be on my right with the cavalry brigade of Gen. BUFORDS, and Gen. BANKS on my left.

Soon afterward I received intelligence that a large force of the enemy's cavalry had crossed on my right and was moving toward Orleans, and that another force had crossed on my left at Sulphur Springs, and taken possession of that place. I immediately ordered Gen. BEAUDRY with the Ninth New-York Cavalry and four mountain howitzers to Sulphur Springs to shell the enemy out of the place, which he did. The rest of my cavalry, consisting of three companies of the First Virginia, and two of the First Maryland, I ordered toward Orleans for the purpose of protecting my right flank. Meanwhile, cannonading was kept up near the bridge, and from all indications I supposed that the enemy would avail himself of the opportunity to make a combined attack against my position. I therefore sent to the left to find Gens. BANKS and RENO, and to the right to look after Gen. McDOWALL's troops, especially the cavalry brigade, and was not a little astonished to learn that Gens. BANKS and RENO were, by order of Gen. POPE, on their march to SHELBYSON, and that no troops could be found on my right, except the cavalry brigade of Gen. BURFORD, which was encamped four miles behind us on the Warrenton road.

To confuse matters still worse, I received a dispatch from Gen. McDOWALL, one section of it directed to Maj.-Gen. BANKS, asking for news from his Corps, and the other directed to myself, informing me that I would join my pontoon train at Fayetteville. I sent this to Gen. BANKS, and requested him to furnish me with what information he could, so that, in the absence of instructions, I might be enabled to direct my movements properly. I also sent to Gens. POPE and McDOWELL, at Warrenton, for an explanation and for orders, but Gen. POPE had left for Warrenton Station, and Gen. McDOWELL did not furnish me with any instructions. It was now nearly sunset, and my situation extremely critical. Threatened on my right and left flanks, an army of 30,000 menacing my front, and separated from me only by a shallow river, fordable at many points for infantry, as well as cavalry and artillery—no supporting force within eight or ten miles—I supposed that it was not really the intention of the Commanding-General to leave me in this position. I was confirmed in my opinion by the answer of Gen. BANKS, who advised me to march to Fayetteville, and by the fragmentary paper saying that I would find my pontoon train at that point.

Considering all this, I resolved to march to Fayetteville at night, and made my preparations accordingly, though I did not believe in the correctness of the whole plan.

Just at the moment when my troops were about to move, one of my officers returned with an order of Gen. POPE, directing me to march to Warrenton and encamp there. I put my troops in motion in compliance with this order, and cautiously withdrew from Waterloo Bridge, as I had not a single company of cavalry to cover my retreat. Before withdrawing, however, I ordered the destruction of the bridge, which was accomplished under the direction of Gen. MILROY, after much exertion and some loss of life. At 2 o'clock next morning, (Aug. 26,) as I was entering Warrenton with my rear guard, I received another order from Gen. POPE, through Gen. McDOWELL, directing me to "force the passage of Waterloo Bridge at daylight."

As this was an impossibility, the troops having marched the whole night on a very accessible road, I reported to Maj.-Gen. POPE this fact, and received orders to stay at Warrenton. During the day, I ascertained that the enemy was marching by Thoroughfare Gap to Manassas, and on the following night that his main army was encamped at White Plains, the advanced guard east of Thoroughfare Gap, and the rear of Orleans.

This news was brought in by all the scouts sent out by me, and some cavalry, to Sperryville, Salem and Gainesville, and immediately communicated by telegraph to Maj.-Gen. POPE. It was also reported to me that the enemy was moving during the night, that LONGSTREET would be in Manassas next day, and that LONGSTREET had not yet joined him, but was two miles from Salem at noon on Wednesday, the 27th. In view of these facts, I proposed to Gen. McDOWELL, to whose command the First Corps had been attached since its arrival at Waterloo Bridge, to concentrate our troops at Gainesville, and thereby separate LONGSTREET's troops from those of JACKSON, taking the enemy at Manassas in the rear, and, by forcing him to evacuate Manassas, effect a junction with the army of Gen. McCLELLAN. This movement was executed.

On the morning of the 27th the First Corps left Warrenton for Buckland Bridge, on the road to Gainesville, with directions to take possession of the road, and thereby open the road to Gainesville. The brigade of Brig.-Gen. MILROY advanced rapidly toward the bridge, and drove the enemy—who was stationed there with some artillery and cavalry—back to Gainesville, while the pioneers repaired the bridge, which had been set on fire and partially destroyed by the enemy. In a short time the whole of Gen. MILROY's brigade had passed the river, and pressed forward against Gainesville, taking on their way about 150 prisoners. I now ordered Gen. SCHENCK to pass the river, and follow Gen. MILROY, and take position behind him. The division of Gen. SCHENCK also crossed the river, and the infantry brigade of Gen. STAHLSCHMIDT remained in reserve at the bridge. Such was the position of the First Corps on the evening of the 27th.

During the night Gen. McDOWALL's corps arrived at Buckland Mills, and I received orders at 3 o'clock in the morning to march to Manassas and to take a position with my right resting on the railroad leading from Warrenton Junction to Manassas Junction—so, at least, I understood the order. On this march our cavalry sent out to the left in the direction of Groveton, was shelled by the enemy about one and a half miles distant from the road on which we marched; and besides this an artillery engagement began between Gen. McDOWELL's corps and the enemy. I immediately halted, ordered the whole corps to countermarch, and formed in order of battle on the heights parallel with the Centreville-Gainesville road. The enemy's infantry and cavalry pickets were about 300 yards from our lines, and our skirmishers had already advanced against them, when, on a report made to Gen. McDOWELL, I received orders to march forthwith to Manassas Junction.

I reluctantly obeyed this order, marched off from the right, and was within two-and-a-half miles from Manassas when our cavalry reported that Manassas was evacuated by the enemy, and that Gen. KEARNEY was in possession of that point. As I was sure that the enemy must be somewhere between Centreville and Gainesville, I asked permission to march to New-Market, whereupon I was directed to march to Centreville. This order was in execution, and the troops prepared to cross the fords of Bull Run, when our advance met the enemy on the road leading from New-Market to Sudley's Ford, this side of Bull Run. About the same time I received a report from Gen. POPE that the enemy was concentrating at Centreville.

Supposing that this was correct, I directed the brigades of Gen. STAHL and Col. SCHENCK to retreat against the enemy this side of Bull Run, on the road to Sudley's Spring, and left Gen. GRAY's Brigade and Gen. SCHIRMER's Division near the fords, the latter Division facing toward Centreville. Although, however, as I had ascertained that Centreville was evacuated by the enemy, I followed with these troops to assist Brig.-Gen. MILROY and Col. McLEAN, who, under the direction of Brig.-Gen. SCHENCK, was briskly engaged with the left of the enemy's forces, whose right had engaged a brigade of the third corps. Our artillery advanced steadily until the darkness of the night interrupted their movements. They encamped near Mrs. HARVEY's farm—one regiment having taken possession of the Centreville-Gainesville turnpike, the main force facing toward Sudley's Spring and Groveton.

On Thursday night, Aug. 28, when the First Corps was encamped on the Heights, south of Young's Branch, near Bull Run, I received orders to "attack the enemy vigorously" the next morning. I accordingly made the necessary preparations at night, and formed in order of battle at daybreak, having ascertained that the enemy was in considerable force beyond Young's Branch, in sight of the hills we occupied. His left wing rested on Catharpin Creek—front toward Centreville; with his centre he occupied a long stretch of woods parallel with the Sudley-Spring Newmarket road; and his right was posted on the hills on the south side of the Centreville-Gainesville road. I therefore directed Gen. SCHENCK to deploy his division on the right of the Gainesville road, and by a change of direction to the left, to come into position parallel with the Sudley-Spring road. Gen. MILROY, with his brigade and one battery, was directed to form the centre, and to take possession of an elevation in front of the so-called "Stone-House," at the junction of the Gainesville and Sudley-Spring roads. Gen. SCHIRMER, with his division forming our left, was ordered to advance quickly to an adjoining range of hills, and to plant his batteries on those hills, at an excellent range from the enemy's position.

In this order our whole line advanced from point to point, taking advantage of the ground—before us, until our whole line was involved in a most vehement artillery and infantry contest. In the course of about four hours—from 6½ to 10½ o'clock in the morning—four whole infantry and nearly all our batteries were engaged with the enemy, Gens. MILROY and SCHENCK advancing one mile, and Gen. SCHIRMER two miles from their original positions.

At this time (10½ o'clock) the enemy threw forward large masses of infantry against our right, but was resisted firmly, and driven back three times by the troops of Gens. MILROY and SCHENCK.

To assist these troops, so hard pressed by overpowering numbers, exhausted by fatigue and weakened by losses, I ordered one battery of reserve to take position on their left, and posted two pieces of artillery under Lieut. BIEBE, of SCHIRMER's Battery, supported by the Forty-first New-York Volunteers, beyond their line, and opposite the right flank of the enemy, who was advancing in the woods. These pieces opened fire with canister most effectively, and checked the enemy's advance on that point.

I now directed Gen. SCHENCK to draw his lines nearer to us, and to attack the enemy's right flank and rear by a change of front to the right, thereby assisting our troops in the centre. This movement could not be executed by Gen. SCHENCK with his whole division, as he became briskly engaged with the enemy, who tried to turn our extreme left. At this critical moment, when the enemy had almost outflanked us on both wings, and was preparing a new attack against our centre, Gen. KEARNY arrived on the field of battle and deployed by the Sudley Spring road on our right, while Gen. RENO's troops came to our support by the Gainesville turnpike. With the consent of Gen. RENO, I directed two regiments and one battery, under Brig.-Gen. STEVENS, to take position on the right of Gen. SCHENCK—the battery on an eminence in front and centre of our line, where it did excellent work during the rest of the day, and where it relieved Capt. DIEDRICH's Battery, which held this position the whole morning. Three regiments were posted between Gen. MILROY and Gen. SCHENCK, and two others, with two mounted batteries, were sent to the assistance of Gen. SCHENCK.

Scarcely were these troops in position when the contest began with renewed vigor and vehemence, the enemy attacking furiously along our whole line, from the extreme right to the extreme left. The infantry brigade of Col. SCHIRMER, commanded by Col. KOLTES, was then sent forward to assist the brigade of Gens. SCHENCK and SCHIRMER, and one regiment was detailed for the protection of a battery posted in reserve near our centre. The troops of Brig.-Gen. REYNOLDS had, meanwhile (12 o'clock), taken position on our left.

In order to defend our right, I sent a letter to Gen. KEARNEY, saying that LONGSTREET was not able to bring his troops in line of battle that day, and requesting him (KEARNEY) to change his front to the left and to advance, if possible, against the enemy's left flank. To assist him in this movement I ordered two long-range rifled guns to report to him, as his own battery had remained in reserve behind his lines.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Gen. HOOKER's troops arrived on the field of battle, and were immediately ordered forward by their noble commander to participate in the battle. One brigade, under Col. CARR, received orders, by my request, to relieve the regiments of Gen. SCHIRMER's Division, which had maintained their ground against repeated attacks, but were now worn out, and nearly without ammunition. Other regiments were sent forward to relieve Brig.-Gen. MILROY, whose brigade had valiantly disputed the ground, against greatly superior numbers, for eight hours.

To check the enemy if he should attempt to advance, and for the purpose of preparing and supporting an attack from our side, I placed four batteries of different commands on a range of hills in our centre, and behind the woods, which had been the most hotly-contested part of the battle-field during the day.

I had previously received a letter from Maj.-Gen. PORTER, saying that FITZ-JOHN PORTER's corps and Brig.-Gen. KING's division, numbering 20,000 men, would come in on our left. I therefore did not think it prudent to give the enemy time to make new arrangements, and ordered all the batteries to continue their fire, and to direct it principally against the enemy's position in the woods before our front.

Some of our troops placed in front were retiring from the woods, but as the enemy—held in check by the artillery in the centre—did not venture to follow, and as at this moment new regiments of Gen. HOOKER's command arrived and were ordered forward, we maintained our position, which Gens. MILROY and SCHIRMER had occupied in the morning.

At 6½ o'clock Brig.-Gen. KING's division of Maj.-Gen. McDOWELL's corps arrived behind our front and advanced on the Gainesville turnpike.

I do not know the real result of this movement, but from the weakness of the enemy's cannonade and the gradually decreasing musketry in the direction of Gen. KEARNEY's attack, I received the impression that the enemy's resistance was broken, and that victory was on our side. And so it was. We had won the field of battle, and our army rested near their dead and wounded, who had so gloriously defended the cause of this country.

THE BATTLE OF THE 30TH AUGUST.

On Saturday, the 30th August, I was informed by Maj.-Gen. POPE that it was his intention to "break the enemy's left," and that I with the First Corps should hold the centre, Maj.-Gen. RENO should take position on my right, and Gen. REYNOLDS on my left. The First Corps took position behind Groveton, on the right of the Gainesville turnpike. My request to have two batteries in reserve behind the centre for certain emergencies—one of Gen. RENO's and one of Gen. REYNOLDS's Division—was not complied with, although all my batteries were more or less worked down, several pieces unserviceable and short of ammunition, and many horses killed or disabled.

After having taken position as ordered, the corps of Maj.-Gen. PORTER passed between the enemy and our lines, and was forming in line of battle on the open field before the first corps and that of Gen. RENO, masking thereby our whole front. Not understanding the object of this movement, and being requested by one of the Staff officers of Gen. PORTER to give my opinion in regard to the ground before us, I immediately made over to the General (PORTER) and suggested that, in accordance with the general plan, his troops should pass more to the right, and join those of Gen. HEAKNY on our extreme right, and direct his attack against the enemy's left flank and rear. I also informed him that there were too many troops massed in the centre, and that Gen. RENO and myself would take care of the woods in his front.

While this was going on, I received repeated reports that the enemy was shifting his troops from the Gainesville Turnpike to his right. I therefore ordered the Fourth New-York Cavalry, under Lieut.-Col. NEWS, to advance in that direction, between Newmarket and Groveton, passing behind our left, and to scout the country as far as they could go. I also sent one regiment of Gen. SCHENCK's Division to the left of our position as an outpost, to observe the enemy's movements. After the lapse of about an hour, I received notice that the cavalry pickets had found the enemy, and that the latter was moving against our left.

I sent the messenger who brought this intelligence to Gen. PORTER's headquarters. Shortly afterward I received by Col. RUCKER, Chief of Staff of Gen. POPE, an order to occupy the "Bald-headed Hill" on my left with one brigade, which I did immediately. Meanwhile, Gen. PORTER's troops, who had not changed their position, advanced into the woods, where we had lost a thousand men the day before. About this time, on our left, where Gen. HEAKNY's was posted, the musketry and cannonading began to increase.

The troops of Gen. PORTER and wholly disappeared in the woods, which led me to believe that the enemy had left his position in part, and that it was the intention of Gen. PORTER to advance the first corps on the Gainesville turnpike. Suddenly, heavy discharges began in front, the corps of Gen. PORTER having met the enemy, who was advantageously posted behind a well-adapted breastwork—the old Manassas Gap Railroad track. At the same time the enemy opened with shell and solid shot against our centre and left wing. Our batteries replied promptly and spiritedly, and from the general appearance of the battle, it was evident we had the whole army of the enemy before us.

It was now about 5 P. M., when awaiting the further development of the battle, I received a dispatch through Gen. McDOWELL, and written by Gen. PORTER, expressing his doubt as to the final result of his attack, and requesting Gen. McDOWELL to "push SIGEL forward." Although I had not received positive orders from Gen. POPE, I immediately made the necessary preparations either to assist Gen. PORTER or to resist an attack of the enemy, should he repel Gen. PORTER and advance against my own position by the centre, by directing Gen. STAHL to deploy his brigade in front, and Gen. SCHENCK to form his regiments in a line of reserve.

During the execution of these movements, Gen. PORTER's troops came out of the woods, bringing a great number of wounded with them. In answer to my question why they were retiring after so short a time, they said that they were out of ammunition. Expecting that the enemy would follow up this retrograde movement of a whole corps with a strong force, I kept my troops well together to meet such an event. This was stood when suddenly incessant volleys of musketry betrayed the enemy in great force on our left, and showed clearly his real plan of attack. To assist Col. McLEAN's Brigade on our left, I directed Gen. MILROY to join his brigade with that of Col. McLEAN. In executing this order, however, Gen. MILROY directed his brigade more to the rear than was intended by me. By this disposition an interval of several hundred paces was left between these two brigades, by which the enemy penetrated, attacking Col. McLEAN's troops in the rear, and compelling them to change their front to the left. They thereby partially evacuated the position they had occupied on the hill.

It was this moment that Gen. SCHENCK was severely wounded at the head of his troops, whom he had repeatedly led against the overwhelming masses of the enemy, when Gen. RAYMOND, who at the beginning of the battle had deployed his troops in front and to the left of Col. McLEAN's Brigade, changed his position and withdrew his battery from a hill to the left of Gainesville turnpike, near Groveton. The enemy immediately took possession of the hill, posted a battery there, and immediately spread his infantry and gray the high and wooded ground before Col. McLEAN's Brigade, and on the flank and almost in the rear of our centre.

To dislodge the enemy from his new-gained position, I ordered forward three regiments of infantry, under Col. KOLTES, who, under a terrible artillery fire, boldly advanced against the hills, but could not regain the lost ground. In this attack I have to regret the loss of the intrepid Col. KOLTES, who was killed while executing the movement ordered. His brigade, though nearly decimated, succeeded in protecting our centre, and preventing the turning of our flank. To avoid the destruction of our troops from the sweeps of the enemy's batteries, as the main attack was now on our left, I ordered Gen. SCHENCK to withdraw his division from the low ground under cover of our artillery, and take position on the hills near the stone house, one brigade to face toward the left.

The brigade of Gen. STAHL followed this movement, and formed in line of battle on our right. Immediately in front of his position, on a hill to the right (north) of the stone-house, I placed a Battery of the Fourth Regulars, which I had met on the turnpike. This battery behaved nobly, and maintained its position until the last hour. Capt. DIEDRICH's Battery occupied a more advanced position, near Groveton. Capt. DIEDRICH's was on our left, and Capt. SCHEIRER's on our right, with Gen. STAHL's Brigade. Gen. MEADE, with his Brigade, with the assistance of several additional regiments which he had brought forward, succeeded in repulsing the enemy on the left. In this gallant conflict his horse was shot under him.

We maintained our position until night had closed in upon us, when
